Pass Court Bill, President Tells Barkley

Japan Speeds More Troops To War Zone Near Peiping

Drive on Tientsin and Ancient Capital Is Predicted.

Tokyo Dispatches Home Divisions

Evacuates Civilians as Negotiations Start; Fighting Lags.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, July 15.—By train, motor truck and afoot heavy Japanese reinforcement were moving into the Peiping area tonight and foreign military attaches predicted operations within two days designed to give Japan possession of Peiping, Tientsin and the connecting railway.

Negotiations for a fresh truce in the eight-day-old conflict were in progress at Tientsin, but no agreement was in sight. Earlier reports of an armistice proved premature. Nevertheless, there was an almost complete cessation of fighting during the day.

Foreign military men, watching a Japanese concentration at Fengtai, important railway junction 5 miles southwest of Peiping, expressed belief nothing short of occupation of Peiping and expulsion of all Chinese troops from the region would satisfy the Japanese.

They had reports 3,500 Japanese in full war equipment were marching to reinforce 3,000 already at Fengtai.

Japan has maintained a garrison there since last September, built barracks there and used it as an advanced base in the fighting which began the night of July 7, when Japanese on night maneuvers clashed with units of the Twenty-ninth Chinese Route army near Marco Polo Bridge, 10 miles west of Peiping.

Foreign military experts believed Japan now has the equivalent of a war strength division in North Hopei, south of the Great Wall, about 15,000 to 16,000 troops.

Foreign attaches said they believed that when the Japanese army had completed its dispositions it would expel Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan's Twenty-ninth Army from North China. They said this might be accomplished without extensive fighting unless the central government at Nanking send strong military aid to the north.

Subordinate officials were carrying on the truce negotiations at Tientsin. A point on which Japanese were understood to be insistent was that North China be excluded from the impending election of a National People's Assembly, which would be tantamount to recognition of separation of North China from the Chinese nation.

Army, Navy Concentrate.

Tokyo, July 15 (AP).—The government announced today troops from Japan's homeland divisions are being sent to North China while officials disclosed a large-scale exodus of Japanese civilians from the Chinese interior was under way.

The war office announced the decision to send units from the home garrison in such a way as to emphasize its view the situation in North China, where relatively small Chinese and Japanese forces have been fighting eight days, has become grave. Such emergency action has not been taken by the Japanese army since 1932, when more than two divisions were sent to Shanghai to overcome Chinese resistance.

Japanese consuls at Kalgan, northwest of Peiping, and Taiyuan, capital of Shensi province, were ordered to withdraw and bring all Japanese nationals with them. There were believed to be 500 Japanese civilians in the Kalgan district, which is linked with Peiping and

Confidant of Stalin Arrives In Capital on Secret Mission

LAZARE KAGANOVICH.

Lazare Moiseyevich Kaganovich, hard-hitting, dynamic assistant commissar of the Soviet Union's defense industry and close confidant of Dictator Josef Stalin, Russia's "man of steel," is now in Washington, The Post learned yesterday.

The man, reputed to possess the best brains in the Politbureau and who often has been mentioned as Stalin's possible successor, slipped so unobtrusively into this country no public announcement of his presence had been made.

On Wednesday the Soviet Embassy entertained a select group of prominent Washingtonians in his honor. Embassy spokesmen declined to discuss the significance of his visit.

The State Department, however, admitting an awareness of his presence here, said he had come with a group of Soviet engineers on "a technical mission." When and how he had arrived, Department officials would not say. Neither did they know what the "mission" was.

Only 44 Years Old.

One of the youngest—he is only 44—and most trusted supporters of the Bolshevist regime, Kaganovich, who affects a little black beard a la Lenin, has a reputation which almost overshadows that of Josef Stalin for conceiving and accomplishing gigantic projects. It was he who directed the building of the Moscow Subway in the face of terrific difficulties; it was he, who as railroad commissar, rehabilitated accident-cursed Soviet railways.

When he was appointed to the latter post in March, 1935, accidents in the Soviet Union's far-flung rail lines had taken a heavy toll. During 1934 alone, there had been 62,000 collisions, causing hundreds of deaths, injury to thousands and material loss of 60,000,000 roubles.

The new commissar changed all that. His first act was to issue iron-clad orders to combat accidents. At the same time he decreed railroad officials would be

20 Battered To Death in Mine Blast

Victims Smashed 'Like Footballs' Against Shaft Walls.

Weeping Wives Storm Workings in Indiana Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Sullivan, Ind., July 15.—A terrific explosion turned the Glendora Coal Co.'s Baker mine into an inferno today, hurling 20 miners—"like footballs," one survivor said—to death against the walls of the shaft.

Nine other miners were injured, three so critically they may die. One hundred and seventy-four miners escaped injury.

Only 3 of the 20 bodies had been brought from the mine. The other 17 bodies had to be left in a corner of the shaft until carbon monoxide gas cleared sufficiently for rescue workers to re-enter, Jack Ogilvie, safety engineer of the Indiana Coal Operators' Association, said.

"I got out alive but I don't know how," said Wesley Bond, one of those working in the area of the explosion. "There was one big blast that mashed me against the wall. It was followed by a big wind. How it blew. It beat against my ears until it felt like railroad spikes were being driven into my head."

Wives Weep at Entrance.

Hoping against hope, weeping wives and children of the trapped men milled forlornly near the mine entrance. They wouldn't believe what officials told them—that all 17 miners left in the shaft were dead.

Earlier there had been scenes of hysterical joy as the 174 unscathed miners rushed from the mine into the arms of relatives.

"The explosion picked me and my buddies up and rolled us like footballs," said Jerry Cox, who suffered head injuries. "Some of my buddies were thrown against the wall and they didn't have a chance."

Cox, his head bandaged, refused to leave the scene. He said he would remain until the bodies of all his "buddies" had been brought out.

Governor Offers Aid.

The mine, 18 years old, is five miles northeast of Sullivan. Its shafts extend two and one-half miles toward Sullivan. Harry Keenan, superintendent, said the explosion occurred about one and three-fourths miles from the entrance. Cause of the explosion had not been determined.

Keenan said only 25 or 30 men were working in the area of the blast. Two or three slight explosions followed the big blast, he said, and there was a flash of fire.

The 20 killed had life crushed out of them, Keenan said, when dashed against the walls.

At Indianapolis Gov. M. Clifford Townsend said "all resources of the State will be used to assist the

Mourning Period Violated By Opposition, He Charges

Condolences Sent By Foreign Envoys

State Funeral Will Be Conducted Today in Senate Chamber.

By the Associated Press.

Congress summoned the Nation's dignitaries yesterday to join in a final stately ceremony today for Senator Robinson (Democrat), of Arkansas, Senate majority leader and elder statesman of the Democratic Party.

Both Houses quickly approved a resolution inviting the President, his Cabinet and military chiefs, the Supreme Court and envoys of all foreign nations to a State funeral at noon today in the flower-decked Senate chamber.

Expressions of sympathy poured into the State Department from foreign governments. A typical message, from Minister Michael MacWhite of the Irish Free State, voiced "profound regret" at Robinson's death, and offered "sincere smypathy" to his family and the United States.

Seventy Reservations.

Nearly 50 Senators and a score of Representatives requested reservations on the special train which will carry Robinson's body to Little Rock, Ark., for burial Sunday.

Senate attaches announced the majority leader's coffin, blanketed with flowers, would be placed in the Senate chamber at 10 a. m. today. It will be in the green-carpeted "pit," where Robinson delivered his final speech last week in defense of the President's court bill.

In the seats of honor on either side will sit Mrs. Robinson and other relatives, while executive officials and diplomats will be grouped around the President's dais.

Sermon by Rev. Phillips.

Only speaking at the service will be a scriptural reading and a brief sermon by the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, Senate chaplain. Choristers from a local church will end the ceremony with a hymn.

Immediately after the funeral, the coffin will be carried to the special train, scheduled to leave at 10 p. m. It will arrive in Little Rock early Sunday morning.

The body will lie in state at the Arkansas Capitol until burial at 4 p. m.

Vice President Garner, long an intimate friend of the majority leader, is hurrying to Little Rock from his Uvalde, Tex., home, where he has been resting for several weeks. He is to return to Washington on the special train.

Text of Roosevelt Letter

Text of President Roosevelt's letter on the Supreme Court bill to Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky:

My Dear Alben:—

I am glad you called my attention to certain events of yesterday and today. Lest there be any misunderstanding in regard to judicial reform, please let me clarify the situation.

Since the untimely death of our majority leader, I had hoped with you that at least until his funeral services had been held a decent respect for his memory would have deferred discussion of political and legislative matters.

It is, therefore, with regret that I find that advantage is being taken of what, in all decency, should be a period of mourning.

Because of this situation, however, I am compelled in the public interest, though against every inclination, to write to you. I do this because you are the acting majority leader in the Senate.

Over four years ago it became apparent to the American people and to the leadership of the new Administration of the National Government and to the newly elected Congress that grave problems of many kinds called for great reforms. The American people, in an overwhelming majority, recognized the need for bank reform, for agriculture reform, for labor reform, for housing reform and for judicial reform.

Lesser Reforms Cited.

I cite the above merely as examples. Other lesser reforms went hand in hand with them as national needs. The Congress and the Administration effected during the first four years many of these reforms. The reform of the processes of justice, the need for which was nothing new, was recommended by me on February 5 of this year. The time had come to act.

In my message to Congress I set forth objectives. With these objectives the overwhelming majority of the people of this country were in accord. With these objectives the overwhelming majority of the Congress were in accord.

Proposed tentative legislation was drawn at that time to facilitate discussion of methods in both Houses of the Congress and discussion commenced immediately in the Congress and throughout the country.

Let me make clear once more the objectives. They constituted improvements in the process of justice in all Federal courts, from the lowest to the highest. Those improvements included systematic addition of younger judges to all such courts in which there were judges beyond retirement age who had not taken advantage of retirement privileges—for the dual purpose of helping the older judges give a maximum of time, and of keeping the social viewpoints of the courts abreast of changing conditions. Those improvements also contemplated adequate machinery for supervision by the Supreme Court of the expeditious dispatch of business by the lower courts, and for getting constitutional questions to the Supreme Court without delay.

Methods Not Sacred.

These were the objectives. At no time have I or any member of my Administration insisted that the method or methods originally proposed be sacred or final except to point out that action was of immediate necessity and, therefore, that the process of constitutional amendment was an impossibility if the objective was to be attained within a reasonable time. It is, of course, clear that any determined minority group in the Nation could, without great difficulty, block ratification by one means or another in at least 13 States for a long period of time.

Objectives can be obtained by constitutional legislation and both the original bill and Senator Robinson's bill were clearly constitutional.

There was the other reason for action by legislation rather than by constitutional amendment. The situation of the civilized world has been, for several years, at a point of extreme danger. This has been caused by three factors—aggression and armament, economic crisis and major social needs.

The United States is happily free from any thought of aggression or armament for aggression, but the people of the United States have called for economic security and for major social improvements. National safety demands them.

New Forms Called for.

About a month ago Senator Robinson advised me that some new form or forms of method were called for if the objectives of judicial reform were to be attained. I told him that in my judgment the bill he proposed would be a satisfactory method of attaining such objectives. I told him further what I had told to all others who have asked my opinion—that on the Congress of the United States falls the primary responsibility for the adoption of methods, but that on the President falls the responsibility of recommending objectives. This is in accordance with the Constitution.

To abandon any reform of the judicial processes at this session of the Congress means an abandonment of the objectives.

An abandonment of judicial reform, including, of course, all the Federal courts, because of the inability of a majority of Senators or a majority of Representatives to agree on method and reach a vote, places the responsibility squarely on the Congress of the United States.

May I, therefore, tell you very simply once more that the objectives of the President and, I believe, of the great majority of our citizens, remain the same, and that I believe that it is the duty of the Congress, and especially of the members of the majority party in the Senate and the House of Representatives to pass legislation at this session to carry out the objectives.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Four Democratic Leaders Attend

Kentuckian Indicated as Choice for Majority Chief.

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt last night charged Senate court plan opponents with violating the "period of mourning" for Senator Robinson's death, and called for enactment by Congress this session of his court bill "objectives."

In a letter to Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, the President served notice the fight will go on and broadly hinted his choice for Senate leader. The temporary truce in the Democratic Party's sharp court split was officially ended.

Hardly had the blunt-worded letter to Barkley been released before the Kentuckian and three other prominent Senate court plan supporters were called to the White House for a secret night conference.

With Barkley were Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, President pro tem of the Senate; Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and Senator Lewis Schwellenbach, of Washington. While White House attaches denied knowledge of their presence, the four Senators discussed legislative and court bill strategy with the President for two hours. No decisions were reached, they said.

In his letter earlier to Barkley, the President said he was "compelled in the public interest" to write to the Senator as "acting majority leader" because "advantage is being taken" of the mourning period.

The President told Barkley he believes "it is the duty of the Congress, and especially of the members of the majority party in the Senate and the House of Representatives to pass legislation at this session to carry out the objectives.

"Since the untimely death of our majority leader, I had hoped with you at least until his funeral services had been held a decent respect for his memory would have deferred discussion of political and legislative matters," he wrote.

Answered by Burke.

A statement in reply was immediately issued by Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, a leader of the opposition. Burke said the opposition Senators are observing the mourning period, but declared, "There has been no cessation of activity at the White House."

The Nebraskan said for his part, he accepted the President's challenge, is "heartily in favor" of continuing debate, and stands ready, willing and anxious "to fight it out to an issue."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, said it was "regrettable" the President accused Senators of taking advantage of the mourning period.

"Every member of the Senate held him in too high esteem ever to think of such a thing," said Wheeler. "In fact they canceled all meetings and all social engagements out of respect for him. The letter in this respect is most amazing and regrettable."

Other court plan opponents answered briefly but pointedly.

Said Senator Frederick Van Nuys, of Indiana:

"The Senate will elect its own leader in due time, and dispose of the court bill in the same way."

"If he insists on pushing the subject," said Senator William H. King, of Utah, "he will find others ready to do it too."

"I have said so much about this

U. S. and Brazil Adopt Finance, Trade Accord

Agreement to Stabilize Exchange, Help Set Up Reserve Bank.

Texts of Statements on Page 7

By William V. Nessly.

The United States yesterday entered into two undertakings with the Republic of Brazil, expected to go far toward improving and cementing relations and increasing trade between the two countries.

The agreements provide:

The United States will sell up to $60,000,000 of its gold stocks to Brazil and make dollar exchange available to Brazil for the purpose of promoting exchange equilibrium. The agreement is designed to help Brazil set up a central reserve bank.

Complementary measures to the existing reciprocal trade agreement are held necessary to meet outside competition "directly subsidized by governments." This provision is interpreted as aimed at Germany's promotion of her trade with Brazil. Two joint committees are to be set up to expand American-Brazilian trade.

The agreements were announced at a joint session in the office of Secretary of State Hull, at which were present Secretary Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Finance Minister Arthur de Souze Costa, of Brazil, and members of their staffs. They marked culmination of the series of conferences the Brazilian finance mission has had here with officials of the two United States departments.

Describe Agreement.

Secretary Morgenthau and the finance minister issued a joint statement on the financial agreement, saying it is designed "to promote the development of conditions favorable to the maintenance of monetary equilibrium between the two countries and to facilitate the establishment by the United States of Brazil of a central reserve bank as part of the program of the Brazilian government for improving the financial

Judge Assails 2-Year Delay In Taylor Case

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Apparent laxity in criminal court prosecutions, uncovered recently by the Washington Criminal Justice Association, was openly assailed by Justice Daniel O'Donoghue yesterday during one of the most unusual District Court sessions on record.

Questioning reasons behind a two-year delay in the trial of Albert Taylor, accused rum runner and fugitive from a second-degree murder charge, Justice O'Donoghue offered Bondsman Louis Weinstein "a last chance" to produce his client in court, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. If he fails to appear the justice said his bond will be forfeited.

Since July, 1935, Taylor has been free under a $1,500 bond. No efforts have been made to bring him to trial, it was pointed out and the bond has remained intact.

On Wednesday, Weinstein was granted another month to produce Taylor for trial. Justice O'Donoghue said he was not familiar with the case and that the facts were not explained to him. He was under the impression, the justice said, that Taylor had but recently been indicted.

Yesterday, convening court in extraordinary session, the justice rescinded his continuance order and called for explanations from Weinstein and the United State's attorney's office.

Didn't Know of Murder Charge

"When I continued the Taylor case until August 14," said Justice O'Donoghue, "I didn't know there was a murder charge against the defendant. I didn't know the case was two years old. I didn't know the defendant had been indicted and arraigned in October, 1935. And I

Mercury Topples To 73 as Shower Brings D.C. Relief

An electrical storm and shower, which broke over the sweltering city late yesterday, lowered the temperature 20 degrees after the mercury had climbed to a maximum of 93 at 3:15 p. m.

Seventy-three was yesterday's minimum. The Weather Bureau predicted fair and warmer conditions for today, with possible showers in the afternoon.

About three-quarters of an inch of rain fell, the forecaster said.

Cooler weather was in prospect for most of the North Central States, the Associated Press reported.

In Chicago meteorologists said temperature would recede to near normal in the heat-afflicted areas of the lower Mississippi Valley.

President Signs Pension Bill for Capitol Workers

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill making privileges of civil service retirement available to legislative employes on Capitol Hill.

The bill, now a law, was sponsored in the House by Representative Rampseck, chairman of the Civil Service Committee. Under its provisions, legislative employes not now under the retirement act will be permitted to apply for retirement benefits by paying salary assessments from the beginning of their jobs.

Employes desiring the law's benefits must give written notice within six months, to the clerk of the House or the secretary of the Senate.

Actually, the law effects immediately only about 12 Capitol Hill workers, but employes who have worked a shorter time are eligible to apply for admittance.

Soviet Fliers Due In D. C. Thursday

The Soviet Union's second contingent of over-the-Pole fliers will be brought to Washington next week—probably Thursday—it developed last night after the departure from Washington Airport of Constantine A. Oumansky, charge d'affaires, and two members of the embassy staff for the West Coast.

Oumansky will receive the fliers officially at Los Angeles tomorrow and fly back to Washington after a round of receptions and dinners, reaching the Capital at 4:23 p. m. Thursday, according to tentative arrangements.

Baby Girl, 5, Wins Paralysis Fight, Faces Pneumonia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, July 15.—Betty Sue Martin, 5, wiggled her toes today in Johns Hopkins Hospital and was happy, while hospital attendants looked on soberly and wondered whether the lovable child will be alive next spring.

Paradoxically, Betty Sue is in relatively robust health as she continues to recover rapidly from paralysis of the arms, legs and diaphragm, yet the specter of death by pneumonia will hover over her for months after she leaves the hospital.

And, to heighten the paradox, the very instrument which saved her life is the very thing that may take it away.

Betty Sue, pretty and brown-eyed, is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Martin, an impoverished couple who live in Ash County, N. C., just across the Tennessee line. Last November she contracted diphtheria, which paralyzed her pharynx for a time, but in a few weeks she recovered—or so it seemed.

Then one day last January Betty Sue complained of being tired. Her legs wobbled. Several times she fell and arose only

1,500 Press Hunt For Earhart Plane In Tropical Heat

By the Associated Press.

Hololulu, July 15.—Fifteen hundred sweltering sailors labored on today toward the finale of their heroic but forlorn quest of the South Seas for Amelia Earhart and Frederick J. Noonan.

Forty-two planes again left the decks of the aircraft carrier Lexington for their third sweep of the equatorial seas about Howland Island.

Zero hopes and sizzling temperatures marked the final phase of the disheartening search. Rain squalls during the night alleviated somewhat the oppressive heat, but the last shred of optimism was gone from the searchers' minds.

Thirteen days have elapsed since Miss Earhart and Noonan disappeared, presumably near Howland, while attempting to fly 2,570 miles from New Guinea to the tiny American insular outpost near the equator.

Ships and fighting planes covered more than 200,000 square miles of the remote area without finding a trace of the plane in which the famous aviatrix and Noonan were flying around the world "just for fun."

Aboard the Lexington, searchers began talking about the end of the disheartening job.

Newton Baker Has Slight Thrombosis

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 15 (AP).—Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, who brought his wife to the medicinal baths here for treatment, tonight was described by his physician as suffering from "a slight cerebral thrombosis."

Mrs. Baker announced previously that her husband, who directed activities of the American Army during the World War, was assured "complete recovery from a slight stroke of paralysis."

Use of Bolling Field Is Sought for Air Lines; Nichols May Seek Expansion of D. C. Airport

A Commerce Department request that the War Department permit Bolling Field to be used as an alternate commercial landing field to Washington Airport was one of four developments yesterday on the widening airport front.

The others were:

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said he is considering sponsoring a measure to close Military road and fill in the lagoon so that Washington Airport might expand its facilities.

The aviation committee of the Board of Trade expressed opposition to the Camp Springs site if the District is assessed any of the cost and reiterated its choice of Gravelly Point.

The Commerce Department's request for authority to transfer commercial operations of air lines to Bolling Field had not been received by the War Department last night, officials said.

Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, who is believed to be favorable to the proposal, said he would make a study of the proposal when it is brought to his attention.

Senator King's bill, which carries out the recommendations of the airport commission, places the cost of constructing, developing and maintaining the Camp Springs flying field definitely on the Federal Government. It is incomplete, however, in that it fails to specify what governmental agency shall supervise construction and operation of the airport.

Although King sent him a copy of the bill, Representative Nichols said he is not sure that he will introduce it in the House. He said he may offer, though, a measure that would close Military road and enable Washington Airport to extend its boundaries.

He believes this expansion will eliminate most of the objections to the present airport and at the same time will give the National Capital an adequate flying field for present needs. The Camp Springs airport, he predicted, cannot be ready for use in less than two years.

The King bill directs that "a public airport for purposes of the United States and the District of Columbia shall be developed and maintained by and under the jurisdiction of" the unnamed agency.

It provides for construction and development of the airport on a site south of a road leading from Camp Springs to Meadows in Prince Georges County.

Not more than 2,500 acres shall be acquired, the bill states, although the commission's report estimated that 1,900 acres were available. The authorized cost is limited to $3,286,250 for land purchase and development with an additional $250,000 allowed for building an express highway from the Pennsylvania avenue bridge in Anacostia to Camp Springs. The latter authorization may be increased by another $50,000 if necessary under a final proviso.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission is directed to pass upon the route and design of the express highway.

Postal Officials Aided Strikers, Bridges Holds

Minority Report Threatens to Take Charge to Senate Floor.

By Sidney Olson.

The Postoffice Department took sides in the recent steel strikes, causing "grievous harm" to one of the parties in the strike, charged Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, yesterday.

Bridges filed 20 points of disagreement with the majority report of the Senate Postoffice Committee in a separate minority report yesterday. The majority report had stated that an investigation of the Postoffice Department's strike policy was unnecessary—that the preliminary investigation had disclosed sufficient proof of the department's impartiality.

The preliminary investigation had begun after Bridges had asked an investigation. Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, at once introduced a counter resolution asking an investigation of the steel industry's strike-breaking methods.

Referred to Liberties Group.

After a wrangle, the committee proceeded on a general investigation without a resolution. After numerous postmasters, Chicago police and Tom Girdler, chairman, Republic Steel Corporation, had appeared and testified, the committee referred the Guffey resolution to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee and reported further investigation of the Postoffice Department was not warranted.

Bridges, in violent disagreement with this report, said yesterday he would make a Senate speech soon on the subject, and that he would introduce new evidence directly to the Senate to prove his contention that the Postoffice Department had taken sides.

1936 Deliveries Claimed.

This evidence will show he said, that the Postoffice Department, which contended in the recent investigation that it refused to deliver food to strike-breakers in the plants on the ground it was "unusual or abnormal" mail service, actually did make that type of delivery during 1936.

Bridges has argued throughout the investigation that the Postoffice Department's recently invoked policy was not legal; had no official precedent; was deliberately put into effect to aid strikers; and set up the Postmaster General, James A. Farley, as a sort of censor of what mail should or should not go through.

He said yesterday that "the Postoffice Department could have safely carried on its proper business despite the attitude of strikers on the outside of several plants by calling on other departments of the Government whose duty it is to protect the employes of the Government and the property of the Government."

He said that nowhere in the United States Code Annotated nor in the Postal Laws and Regulations is mail service classified as "unusual or abnormal."

New Faces in Congress

REPRESENTATIVE G. HEYWARD MAHON.

South Carolinian Chosen to Fill Vacancy and Succeed Himself; Served as Major in World War; Frowns on C. I. O.

By Liam K. Lenihan.

It took only one day of balloting to declare G. Heyward Mahon, of South Carolina, a Representative to two Congresses.

Elected last November to the Seventy-fourth Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John J. McSwain, he succeeded himself by virtue of that fact to the Seventy-fifth, which in itself should be a precedent.

Biographical note: He was born in Williamston, Anderson County, S. C., in November, 1889; moved to Greenville, his present home, at the age of 9; graduated from local public schools, then attended The Citadel, military college of his State at Charleston. During the World War, Mahon held the rank of major and commanded the First Battalion of the 118th Infantry; was wounded at Bellicourt in the drive on the Hindenburg Line. Since the war he has engaged in business as a retail merchant. He is a member of the American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, Baptist Church, Rotary Club, National Council Boy Scouts of America, as well as being a director of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and a trustee of Greenville Woman's College. He has also served as post commander and department commander of the American Legion; is a deacon in his church and superintendent of the Sunday School.

A believer in the "right to work" as well as the "right to strike," Representative Mahon, commenting on John L. Lewis' C. I. O., said it was "too successful to start with."

As a member of the Military Affairs Committee, the South Carolinian believes adequate national defense is "the only insurance against war." "Adequate but not extravagant," he commented. "We must, however, do something for our Navy and air force, because they are woefully weak."

Threats to Peace Force Roosevelt To Give Up Cruise

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt, described as apprehensive over threats to peace in Europe and the Orient, will forego his usual week-end cruise and remain in Washington tomorrow and Sunday to keep in close touch with developments.

This was announced yesterday at the White House a short time before the Chief Executive conferred with three of his diplomatic advisers on the international situation.

The President was represented as being seriously concerned less a dangerous eruption be caused either by the Sino-Japanese crisis in North China or the nonintervention emergency in the Spanish civil war.

He is being kept constantly informed of the foreign situation through State Department dispatches and news reports. Supplementing these sources of information, he summoned to the White House this afternoon Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, Norman H. Davis, American "Ambassador at Large to Europe," and John Van A. MacMurray, Ambassador to Turkey and chairman of the joint preparatory committee on Philippine affairs.

Bandit Robs Missouri Bank of $20,000, Flees

Springfield, Mo., July 15 (AP).—A shotgun-armed bandit robbed the Citizens Bank of $20,000 here this morning and escaped with an accomplice who waited for him a block away at the wheel of a stolen automobile.

Poultrymen Will Eat 800 Hens at Session

Baltimore, Md., July 15 (AP).—When poultrymen and hatcherymen from all states in the Union and Canada sit down at their convention banquet tables at the Fifth Regiment Armory next Wednesday night, they'll eat—chicken!

And what's more, the visiting fowl producers have insisted on "spring chicken a la Maryland," so the caterer has ordered approximately 800 birds, hatched and raised within the confines of the State.

Black Foresees Lengthy Fight To Aid Worker

'Just Begun,' Says Alabama Senator Before U. Va. Institute.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 15.—Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama, declared tonight that millions of "Americans who love their fellow Americans 'have only just begun to fight'" for Government protection of farmers and industrial workers.

Senator Black, debating before the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, said American farmers are "entitled to have their Government protect them from the bankruptcy produced by low farm prices."

Industrial workers have a right, he said, to the same protection "against working hours in industry destructive to health, and to assure the payment to them of a minimum wage adequate to the minimum needs of an American citizen."

Black's assertions were made in a debate with James Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, on Federal control of wages and hours.

Emery, opposing Federal control, asserted there should not be substituted for the limited control, which may be exercised by local governments through the police power of the State, exclusive authority of Congress to regulate wages and hours in every local employment that may be said to affect commerce.

Establishment of an international system for distribution of the world's raw material sources among the nations to meet economic needs was urged before the institute by Clark M. Eichelberger, director of the League of Nations Association, and Grover Clark, journalist and consultant on Far Eastern affairs.

Discussing governmental responsibility toward insecurity of unemployment, R. Gordon Wagenet, director of the Bureau of Unemployment, Social Security Board, outlined the growth of popular opinion in favor of Government responsibility.

T. Scott Miyakawa, New York correspondent for the Japan Times and Mail, told the institute unless nations like Japan can have freer access to raw materials and be able to pay for them in kind, peace will remain an illusion.

EIGHTEEN YO-HOING members of the House Naval Affairs and Appropriations committees will be aboard the destroyer Porter this morning when that vesel weighs anchor for the Pacific Coast. The members, however, are going only as far as Norfolk.

There they will inspect the establishments of the Fifth Naval District and, perhaps, be junketed a trifle, as some jocular members now describe such incidents.

The group will return to Washington Sunday night aboard a revenue cutter, arriving here early Monday morning.

Representative Norman R. Hamilton, of Virginia, arranged the trip.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT got its $194,536,063 for nonmilitary functions yesterday, but the Department of the Interior still was whistling for its appropriations after the House had wrangled most of the afternoon over the $133,000,000 bill for Secretary Ickes' bureaus.

Senate approval of compromises on the War Department measure sent it to the White House amid talk of a Presidential veto because it carried a $105,000,000 appropriation for flood control, half of which would come from relief funds. The total for this work was exactly double the amount originally approved by the House.

The Interior Department appropriation bogged down when House members fought all afternoon over Senate changes which had added reclamation projects and other features previously discarded by the House.

After extended discussion, the House refused, 239 to 89, to approve a Senate amendment which would have prohibited the Government from deducting certain sums from claims of Oklahoma's five civilized tribes of Indians. The sums, totalling $19,000,000, are said to have been paid to the Indians as gratuities.

Later, the House voted, 190 to 123, against acceptance of a Senate amendment restoring to the bill the $1,250,000 Gila reclamation project in Arizona.

SENATOR GUFFEY requested, in a bill, regulation of the anthracite coal industry modeled after the government provided in the Guffey soft-coal law . . . The House Judiciary Committee gave its sanction to a resolution giving consent of Congress to an interstate minimum wage compact ratified by Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island . . . The wage-hour issue also concerned Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, who offered his bill providing a 40-cent minimum wage and a work week of 40 hours, maximum . . . Transatlantic air-mail service, for which British and American aircraft already are making experimental flights, was indorsed by the House Postoffice Committee when it backed a bill fixing a 20-cent postage rate for a half-ounce letter.

Senator Royal S. Copeland will run for Mayor of New York, all right, all right, but he will do it only as a last party harmony resort and if all five of the city's borough leaders agree they can't agree on anybody else. So he informed New York leaders in reply to suggestions he oppose Mayor LaGuardia.

He emphasized he does not want the nomination and would not seek it. He said, however, he would accept it "reluctantly" if the city's five borough leaders asked him and if they convinced, him that they could not agree on another candidate.

REPRESENTATIVE THOM (Democrat), of Ohio, introduced a bill under which members of the President's Cabinet would attend Tuesday and Friday sessions of the Senate and Monday and Thursday House sessions "to give information asked by resolution, or in reply to questions" . . . Appointment of an additional judge for the sixth judicial circuit bench—Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Tennessee—was approved by the House Judiciary Committee . . . Appropriation of $1,000,000 for an antigrasshopper war was voted by the Senate, sending the bill to the White House . . . Alabama Senators Black and Bankhead, who visited the White House with Gov. Graves of that State, said they are hopeful of favorable action on a long list of public works projects . . . Senator Borah, of Idaho, said "at the first opportunity" he will ask that the Senate over-ride the President's veto on the land bank interest rates bill . . . Senator Bilbo, of Mississippi, modified his bill for a farm research laboratory in the South to provide for State contributions.

REPRESENTATIVE RANKIN (Democrat), Mississippi, said a measure to develop regional power and conservation agencies is, from the standpoint of benefits for the average person, probably "the greatest piece of constructive legislation" ever proposed to Congress.

Rankin testified before a House committee on the legislation to create seven "little TVA's." It was introduced as a result of suggestions made by President Roosevelt in a message to Congress.

Over 70 Attend Outing Of District Lions Club

The annual outing of the Washington Lions Club was held Wednesday at Camp Letts, the Y. M. C. A. boys' camp on Rhodes River, near Annapolis, with more than 70 members in attendance. Leonard DeGast, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and past president of the club, served as host.

District Governor Bert Piers was among the honor guests. Hugh V. Keiser was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. The program included bridge, a yacht trip, and a baseball game between a Lions Club nine and a team representing 250 boys at the camp.

First Lady Mute As Page of Radio Script Is Missing

New York, July 15 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, one of the Nation's most experienced speakers, knew today what it meant to be at a loss for words.

The words were lost—literally.

The First Lady became temporarily speechless. She murmured in distress. There was a whispered conference, and then the program went on smoothly once more. Somebody rushed over another page 9.

After the broadcast, Mrs. Roosevelt laughed good-naturedly over the mishap.

"I had been over the script so much, I probably could have made up what should have been there—if I had realized what happened. But I went right on reading and started the top of page 10," she said.

Have you lips that rejoice in Cool Comfort?

THE COMFORT-LOVER'S LIPS
The mouth is capable, and therefore comparatively large. The upper lip clings snugly to the teeth, whereas the lower lip is considerably more fleshy, and curves upward in the center. There is a fulness in the cheeks on either side of the mouth. The mouth and lips typical of those who love solid comfort and luxury.

Leader Admits Pickets' Plan To Club Police

Chicago Strikers Planned Military Attack at Plant, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—A strike leader testifying at the inquest into ten deaths in the Memorial Day steel riot described today an attack along military lines he said was planned to "establish a strong picket line" at Republic Steel Corporation's Grand Crossing plant.

Louis Selinek, head of the union at the Republic mill and member of the strikers' strategy committee, told of the plan in testimony before a coroner's jury of six American Legion members.

The union leader admitted the strike strategists had planned, at a closed session the day before the riot, "to use camouflaged picket banners to break through the (police) lines." He denied, however, the pickets carried guns.

Selinek's statement said nearly a dozen organizers were at the strategy meeting. Each was to appoint five captains, who in turn would direct a group of pickets in the march on police, he testified.

Murphy Orders Roads Open.

Detroit, July 15 (AP).—Gov. Frank Murphy predicted today a quick settlement of a strike that reduced sharply the number of trucks operating between Michigan cities and instructed State police to keep the highways open while the strike is in progress.

In three counties, sheriff's officers and State policemen ordered strike pickets to desist from halting trucks. There was no violence.

Discharged by Ford.

Detroit, July 15 (AP).—John Schipper charged at a National Labor Relations Board hearing today he was discharged by the Ford Motor Co. because of his membership in the United Automobile Workers Union, three days after the United States Supreme Court declared the Wagner act constitutional.

He was dismissed, he testified, 15 minutes after he showed his foreman a newspaper account of a statement by Henry Ford, founder of the automobile concern, "in which he said he had nothing against union activities, and his employes could do as they wished about joining them."

Withdraw Ban on Reporters.

Pittsburgh, July 15 (AP).—The National convention of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers withdrew a resolution late today barring all reporters not paid-up members of the American Newspaper Guild.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, a Hearst paper, the Post-Gazette, a Paul Block paper, and the Pittsburgh Press, a Scripps-Howard paper, had withdrawn their reporters because of the union stand.

Loyal Workers Stoned.

New York, July 15 (AP).—Workmen returning to their jobs in a strike-besieged shipyard today dodged stones while the courts began "cracking down" on pickets charged with rock-throwing and violating an injunction.

Supreme Court Justice Lewis L. Fawcett acted to punish an alleged violation of his eight-point injunction prohibiting picketing at the Wheeler Shipyard, Coney Island. He cited Sidney Sandes, organizer of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, to show cause tomorrow why he should not be held in contempt of court.

While agreements were reached with four other shipyards, terminating strikes, the union openly disregarded the antipicketing injunction, termed by Allan S. Haywood, regional C. I. O. director, "a patent strikebreaking maneuver."

As the strike entered its second month at three other shipyards, pickets at the Robins Dry Dock & Repair Co., in Brooklyn, jeered employes reporting for work. Three men were stoned.

Town Ejects S. W. O. C. Leader.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 15 (AP).—Noel Beddow, regional Steel Workers Organizing Committee director, and L. J. Smith, United States Department of Labor conciliator, both of Birmingham, said they were "forced" to leave Cleveland, Tenn., today by "12 or 15 men."

A five-week strike at Cleveland of 2,000 steel and iron workers employed at four plants ended yesterday. The men were divided in union affiliations between the C. I. O., whom Beddow represents, and the American Federation of Labor. Beddow said he and Smith had gone to Cleveland at "the telephoned request of officials of the Brown Stove Works in an effort to complete an agreement for the workers."

Auditor Checks Books Of Suspended Steward

Marion, Va., July 15 (AP).—Samuel A. Durham, steward of Southwestern State Hospital, awaited today the results of an audit of hospital books and records requested by Shirley Carter, chairman of the general hospital board.

State auditors Robert Waller and R. E. Brooking arrived yesterday to check the records.

Spared Sorrow of Death for a Week

Logan and Betty Kline, 9 and 5 years old, were away at camp when their older sister was drowned last week. Rather than ruin their vacation, their father withheld news of the tragedy until it was time for them to come home yesterday.

2 Children Return From Camp To Learn Sister Was Drowned

Eight-year-old Betty Kline and her brother, Logan, two years younger, came home from two happy weeks at Camp Bennett last night to hear for the first time of the drowning of their oldest sister, Mary Louise, in the Potomac last Friday.

Their father, Logan Kline, riverman, was at the Central Union Mission to greet them but said he would not break the sad news until they reached home at 3914 K street northwest.

Mary Louise, 12, was drowned close to her home after she lost her water wings. It was the first time she had gone swimming in the Potomac. Her 11-year-old sister, Nellie, watched her die, helpless.

The death of the oldest of his six children did not dull the consideration of the father for the rights of others. He telephoned the mission early yesterday to say that Nellie would not be able to go to Camp Bennett with the 88 children scheduled to leave for the camp for underprivileged children at Brookeville, Md., today.

"I thought I'd better let you know," he said, "so that her place could be taken by some other deserving child. She is too sad to go to camp now."

Both Mary Louise and Nellie attended the camp last summer.

Baby Faces Pneumonia Peril

with difficulty. By mid-February she was so sick that when she toppled over she couldn't get up at all.

She was rushed to Duke University Hospital at Durham, N. C. Her condition rapidly became worse. The crucial stage was reached when paralysis of the diaphram set in, making breathing difficult and labored.

Betty Sue was more dead than alive when she arrived at Johns Hopkins Hospital March 21 to be installed immediately in a respirator. For 82 days she stayed in the "playhouse"—that is what she calls it—continuously at first, then at intervals broken by rest periods as she gained her fight for life.

Both her legs were placed in plaster casts to keep the bones straight while she lay for days in the same prone position, only her head showing.

On June 9 she was divorced from the respirator for good. Yesterday she played in her crib, arms almost as shipshape as they ever were and legs with pep aplenty.

"Wiggle your toes, Betty Sue," the doctor asked.

With a bashful smile, she suited the request with 10 individual wiggles.

"Now kick my hand."

First with her right foot, then with the left, Betty Sue kicked the physician's palm, held about 10 inches above her toes as she sat upright in the crib. Her face betrayed no sign of exertion or pain.

Long since established as one of the "sweethearts" of Harriet Lane Clinic, the pediatrics division of the hospital, Betty Sue probably will be discharged in a few weeks, the doctor said. The chief problem now, he added, is to place her in an orthopedic convalescent home where her legs and arms can be massaged regularly to insure complete recovery.

After that—the doctors and nurses have their fingers crossed. For some reason, persons who have been "respiratorized" and who contract a cold within a year or so afterward are particularly susceptible to pneumonia. Worse, the pneumonia generally is extremely severe.

"If it was may child," said the doctor who has Betty Sue's case, "I would send her to Florida this winter, or somewhere else where there would be less cold and pneumonia risk."

But the tiny patient's parents are poor folk. Financially unable even to be at their daughter's side in Baltimore, they probably will fetch Betty Sue to Ash County and hope for the best.

Clerk Pleads Guilty To Mail Theft Charge

Hagerstown, July 15 (AP).—Asa Jones, 50, Frederick Postoffice clerk, pleaded guilty to charge of robbing the United States mails before United States Commissioner Angle Wolfinger here today and was held under $1,000 bond for action of the Federal grand jury. Jones failed to furnish bond and was taken to Baltimore.

Celler Defends Amendment to Tax on Capital

Money 'Frozen' by Present Revenue Act, Sponsor of Change Says.

Charging the present capital gains and losses tax "discourages new enterprises and freezes capital," Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, yesterday defended his proposed amendment to the 1936 revenue act providing that gains or losses established on the sale or exchange of a capital asset shall not be taken into account "in computing gross or net income" if the asset has been held by the taxpayer a year or more.

Celler insisted in a radio address nationally broadcast last night that "no other nation in the world imposes such a tax upon its citizens. . . Capital gains are extraordinary and nonrecurrent. It is illogical to tax capital gains as income, for the two factors are wholly different in their nature."

"It is proper to pluck the fruited income from the tree, but what fool would cut off the branches and plow into the trunk? It is equally foolish for the Government, in addition to taxing income—the fruit of our labors—to tax the source of that income—capital."

Celler said he believed in taxing gains on capital assets which were held for less than a year, "because this appears to reach the ordinary speculator. No one desires to let him out of taxation when speculation is his principal means of making a living."

He asserted the present tax has resulted in a "substantial loss of revenue" to the Government through retarding sales and diminishing revenue derived from such stock and bond transfer taxes, as well as real estate transfers or sales.

He recalled that New York State's comptroller, Morris Tremaine, has demanded "the outright repeal" of this tax. Celler said repeal of this tax would increase the Treasury's annual revenues by $250,000,000 through increases in the turnover tax on securities and through business upturns thereby resulting.

Congress Heights, Alexandria Bridge Sought by Schulte

Eventual erection of a bridge across thee Potomac River connecting Congress Heights and King street, Alexandria, is contemplated in a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

The measure authorizes an appropriation of $25,000 to finance a survey by Army engineers to determine "the advisability and feasability" of such a project. It calls for a report to Congress not later than February 1, 1938.

Schulte, a member of the District Committee, said he proposed to place the entire cost on the Federal Government as the span would be used by persons from all parts of the country.

New York, July 15 (AP).—Montie Patterson, of Los Angeles, president of the American Shoe Cleaners, Dyers and Tonsorial Porters union, announced tonight a drive would be started immediately to organize the Nation's 500,000 bootblacks.

He said the union, which is a voluntary association with about 12,000 members, has applied for affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Held For Murder

ALBERT R. KNIGHT, once well-to-do oil company executive, was held in $10,000 bail at Philadelphia on charge of attempted murder of his three daughters by burning down his home so he might collect $120,000 life insurance. The children were uninjured.

Attempt to Kill 3 Girls for Insurance Charged to Father

Lansdowne, Pa., July 15 (AP).—A 55-year-old father was held in $10,000 bail today on a charge of attempting to murder three of his daughters by setting fire to his home after he had insured them for $120,000.

The father, Albert R. Knight, was arrestde on a charge of arson after the fire May 28 and held in $5,000 bail. The three daughters, Ruth, 23; Sue, 19, and Mary, 17, and a son, David, 15, were in the house, but escaped. Knight denied the arson charge at the time.

After Knight's arrest today on the new charge, William R. Toal, assistant district attorney of Delaware County, said Knight had taken out insurance policies aggregating $60,000 face value with a double indemnity clause six months before the fire.

Five Men Arested In Gambling Raid

Five men were taken in a gambling raid yesterday in the 800 block Eleventh street northwest. The raid was led by Detective Sergt. G. C. Deyoe.

Two were charged with setting up a gaming table, Barney Berlinsky, 42, of 5102 Ninth street northwest, and Milton Simon, 37, of 3608 Eleventh street northwest. Both were released on $1,500 bond.

Police said they had a warrant for Simon, issued last October, but had not been able to serve it until yesterday. He was arrested on two charges.

Scottsboro Jury Convicts Youth For Third Time

Death Is Recommended in Second of 9 Retrials in Attack Case.

By the Associated Press.

Decatur, Ala., July 15.—Clarence Norris, colored, was convicted today for the third time of criminal assault in the Scottsboro case by a jury which recommended the death penalty.

Twice saved from electrocution by the United States Supreme Court, Norris listened stolidly as the court clerk read the verdict.

It was the second returned in the retrials of nine colored men accused of assaulting two white women, textile mill workers, aboard a freight train bound to Huntsville, Ala., six years ago.

"I will appeal the sentence to hell and back," declared Samuel S. Leibowitz, of New York, chief of defense counsel.

Judge W. W. Callahan said he would formally sentence Norris next week, probably Thursday. The trial of Charlie Weems is scheduled to open that day.

The State demanded the chair for Norris as "a warning to other rapists and a protection for the womanhood of this State."

Judge Callahan charged the jury, just before it took the case at 10:50 a. m., that "this suit is not Victoria Price vs. Clarence Norris, but the State of Alabama vs. Clarence Norris."

"Where the woman is white," he added, "there is a strong presumption under the law that she did not yield to the advances of a Negro."

Defense witnesses attacked the "general reputation" of Mrs. Price after she identified Norris as one who assaulted her aboard a freight train when she and Ruby Bates, textile mill workers, caught a ride to their homes after seeking work in Chattanooga, Tenn.

In the first of the retrials, Haywood Patterson was sentenced to 75 years' imprisonment in January, 1936.

Clipper on Return Hop From Ireland

Foynes, Irish Free State, July 15 (AP).—The Pan-American Clipper III rose smoothly off the River Shannon tonight to begin its return flight across the North Atlantic. It was headed for Botwood, Newfoundland, where it started its west-east flight July 5.

Capt. Harold E. Gray estimated the voyage would take about 16½ hours. He said he expected to pass in midocean the Caledonia, British plane, which took off from Botwood today.

The two big flying boats are making experimental flights preceding regular transatlantic service.

Coal Price Fixing Hearings Started

By the Associated Press.

The Bituminous Coal Commission began hearings yesterday on standards to be used in fixing soft-coal prices under the Guffey control act.

The importance to be given the use of the coal in determining its price was the only major issue raised. The operators who testified suggested that the commission should follow the standards fixed under the first Guffey act in 1935, with minor exceptions.

Plan Dropped To Call Figures In Tax Inquiry

Doughton Says Congress Is Set to Prepare Remedial Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, said yesterday the Congressional Tax Inquiry Committee has abandoned any idea of subpenaing individuals described by Treasury officials as having avoided taxes.

None has volunteered to testify, Doughton said.

"We have sufficient information, I believe," he said, "on which to base legislation designed to reduce tax avoidance."

The committee will meet in closed session next week. By that time, Doughton asserted Congressional bill drafters expect to have measures ready for submission.

The chairman predicted Congress would pass legislation to close tax loopholes this session even though the death of Senate Leader Robinson should hasten adjournment.

Advised "Incorrectly."

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, said in a statement during the day that Robert Jackson, former internal revenue general counsel, had given Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt "illegal advice" about her tax liability.

Jackson, now an Assistant Attorney General, wrote the Congressional committee Wednesday that Mrs. Roosevelt had consulted the Treasury about a contract she made for speaking over the radio and was advised it would result in no gains to her that would be taxable.

"I have the highest regard for the charitable impulses of Mrs. Roosevelt," Fish said, "but not for the utterly untenable, indefensible and illegal advice of Mr. Jackson . . .

Law Is Cited.

"Mrs. Roosevelt earned the income by her radio speeches and directed where it should go. . . . The law specifically requires that all income should be set forth and permits an allowance up to 15 per cent for charity, whether assigned or not . . .

"If earned income can be diverted directly to charity without report for income tax purposes then the duPonts, Mellons, Rockefellers and Morgans can divert their income direct to selected charities and avoid payment of approximately 60 per cent on surtaxes to the Government."

One protest, from Jessie Ball duPont, wife of the late Alfred L. duPont, went into the committee's records today.

Charge Answered.

It replied to testimony of Arthur L. Kent, Treasury attorney, that duPont or his estate would have paid $200,000 more in taxes from 1931 to 1935 had he not transferred more than $1,000,000 worth of property to Nemours, Inc., a personal holding company.

Mrs. duPont wired the committee that Kent's statement and the inferences to be drawn from it "are misleading, unwarranted and unjust."

"Not a dollar of the income of Nemours, Inc., was ever used in the payment of any household expense of Mr. duPont or of any member of his family."

FHA to Turn Back $6,500,000 to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Housing Administration, officials said yesterday, expects to turn back to the Treasury about $6,500,000 of its $10,000,000 appropriation for this fiscal year.

The gency, they said, will put its field force on a self-sustaining basis August 1 and will elimimate unnecessary State directors' offices.

The organization at present has an income of about $6,000,000 annually from charges for mortgage insurance. This gradually is increasing.

A reserve of $19,000,000 already has been accumulated, and authorities said the time has come to use some operating revenues to meet operating expenses.

Slain Man Found Trussed in Auto

New York, July 15 (AP).—Children playing ball in a Brooklyn street today found a victim of an "execution knot" slaying huddled in the back seat of a parked car.

Police said three bullets ended the man's life, but about his neck was a rope, so cleverly knotted to his arms and legs that the slightest struggle to escape would have caused strangulation.

Officers found no identifying clews. The car had been stolen from a physician. The method of tying the man so that the rope would cause death if the bullets failed, has been used several times in Brooklyn homicides.

Roof-Top Romeo Kayoed by Father And Fined $200

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—Substituting a roof for the balcony Shakespeare made famous, Tom Talmeter, 20-year-old farm youth from Mount Vernon, Ill., played Romeo today and was fined $200 for it.

Talmeter told Judge Justin F. McCarthy he was interrupted in a roof-top love-making scene with 19-year-old Nancy Anderson by her father, Thomas, who knocked him out with a single punch.

"Her father didn't want her to go out with fellows," he said, "but she was so pretty that I liked her right away."

Talmeter said he espied Nancy watering the flowers in the Anderson "roof garden." He climbed to a roof three houses away and scampered across houstops to her side.

"I was just starting to tell her I liked her when he father came up the back stairs," Tom said sadly, rubbing his jaw.

He went to a cell to serve out the fine, and as he passed Nancy she cut him cold.

Rum Price Boost Effective Today

Richmond, Va., July 15 (AP).—A new State liquor control board price list will become effective tomorrow with prices of spirits advanced 5 to 10 cents on 44 items and the majority of the 4-5 quart packages eliminated.

The list, in which only five items have been reduced, includes the cheapest whisky ever offered by the board—a rye at $1.20 a quart—and also the cheapest gin at 95 cents a quart.

Causes for the price increases are three-fold, the board pointed out. The price of grain has increased from 70 cents per bushel to $1.45. Whiskies have increased in age and now under the Federal Alcoholic Administartion all straight brands must be at least 18-months old instead of only 12, as was required prior to July 1.

Phipps Suggests State Building Site

Annapolis, Md., July 15 (AP).—Mayor Louis N. Phipps' suggestion is that the new State Office Building be located on College avenue between the postoffice and Bladen street and be connected by a tunnel with the government house, State House and Court of Appeals Building.

Mayor Phipps, re-elected this week for another term, made the suggestion today in a letter to Joseph O'McCusker, deputy State comptroller. He recommended that the entire block on College avenue from the postoffice to Bladen street be purchased by the State for the building and grounds.

2 Area Dentists Honored With Fellowships

F. A. C. D. Degrees Are Awarded Dr. Lynch and Dr. Erikson.

Dr. Daniel F. Lynch, of 1835 K street northwest, and Dr. B. E. Erikson, of Rockville Pike, Md., have been made fellows of the American College of Dentistry, it was announced yesterday. The fellowships, which are honorary, are considered among the highest distinctions attainable by members of the dental profession.

To become a fellow of the exclusive organization a dentist must have practiced at least 10 years and have contributed to teaching and research. Fellows are entitled to use the initials "F. A. C. D." after their names.

Only 650 men in the country hold fellowships in the college. This year's list, which was read at the American Dental Association convention being held in Atlantic City, contains 65 names. Dr. William N. Cogan, dean of the Georgetown University Dental School, who became a fellow in 1928, was one of the first Washingtonians to receive the honor.

The college, which corresponds to the American College of Surgery, established the fellowships in order to encourage high standards of research.

Dr. Lynch, who is secretary-treasurer of the District of Columbia Dental Society, completed his dental studies at the University of Maryland in 1925. Dr. Erickson received his degree in dental surgery at George Washington University in 1919.

Board Set to Enter Rail Wage Dispute

By the Associated Press.

George M. Harrison, president of the Railroad Labor Executives Association, said yesterday the nonoperating unions were "no way near" an agreement with the railroads on a new wage and hour scale.

The National Mediation Board is scheduled to step in unless the unions reach an agreement today.

The unions asked an increase of 20 cents an hour. The railroads first countered with an offer of 2 cents. Any further proposals have not been made public.

The unions are taking a strike vote, as are the operating unions (brotherhoods) which have asked a 20 per cent raise.

Wage Board Asks Record Of Employment

Employers of Women and Minors Must Keep Data on Workers.

The District Minimum Wage Board yesterday issued an order regarding District of Columbia employers of women and children to keep a record concerning such employes, and fixed penalties for failure to do so at from $25 to $100 in fines, or from ten days' to three months' imprisonment.

The order provides that the records be kept for at least three years after the date of entry and be open to inspection by members and representatives of the board. The six items of information required by the board are names in full of each female and minor employed, including both males and females under 18; address, occupation, date of birth of all minor employes, total hours worked per week, amount of wages each pay period.

The order, signed by Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the board; John H. Hanna and Arthur L. Schoenthal, board members, also stipulated that its effective date would be "30 days from July 15."

Another order issued by the board rescinded all previous orders governing the minimum wage law.

Eden Urges Neutrality Pact to Keep Europe From 'Abyss' of War

Denies Britain's 'Submission' to Fascist Powers

Belligerent Rights for Both Factions in Spain Only Hope, He Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 15.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden warned tonight Europe would approach the "abyss" of war should non-intervention in Spain collapse.

Defending his compromise plan for Europe's neutrality—which no power has accepted—Eden told the House of Commons "The governments of Europe know that if non-intervention breaks down, the risks of European conflict are inevitably increased."

The crux of the debate was the Labor Party's opposition to granting "limited" belligerent rights to the Spanish combatants. Labor Leader Clement Attlee charged Eden had "surrendered to the Fascist powers" by "submitting to a crude and obvious attempt" by Italy and Germany "to weigh the scales against the Spanish government."

He called the plan "unjust, ill-conceived and dangerous."

Faces "Perilous Phase."

Europe faced a definite alternative, Eden answered, either that the proposals "fail altogether or that belligerent rights will be granted and foreigners will be withdrawn" from Spain.

"If they (the proposals) fail—and let us make no mistake about this—Europe will enter on a new and more perilous phase," Eden declared.

Attlee argued Eden was endeavoring to "reconcile the irreconcilable," contending the Fascist nations were making a mere pretense of neutrality.

The foreign secretary showed anger when the opposition demanded debate at such a critical time, the eve of presentation of the compromise proposals to the nonintervention committee tomorrow. He accused the Laborites of "a disservice to the cause of peace."

Eden asked for indorsement of his plan "not because you like the individual items—there are items that I don't like myself—but because we believe they are a contribution to European collaboration, and therefore a contribution to peace."

Optimistic British official opinion expressed gratification none of the 26 other neutrality nations had indicated flat disapproval. Other well informed sources, however, were frankly pessimistic.

Fascist Powers Noncommittal.

France was reported ready to discuss future nonintervention on the basis of Eden's plan, but to be insistent on modifications.

Germany and Italy were noncommittal. General feeling in Rome indicated skepticism that the withdrawal of foreign troops from both Spanish armies could succeed. Berlin officials indicated Reichsfuehrer Hitler's reply would accept the plan as a basis for discussion. It will be ready for the meeting tomorrow, they said.

Eden's plan would continue neutral observers on merchant ships visiting Spanish ports, in the ports themselves and on Spanish frontiers; discontinue the naval patrol; effect withdrawal of all foreign troops; extend the nonintervention agreement to other powers, and grant "limited" belligerent rights to both Spanish combatants.

Fascist Counter-attack.

Madrid, July 15 (AP).—Insurgent forces fought desperately today to regain ground lost in the government's offensive west of Madrid, especially in the Brunete sector. Observers saw in this action indication the first phase of the government drive, ten days old, had ended.

Yugoslavia Church Tension Increases

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 15 (AP). Tension between the Serbian orthodox and Catholic churches in Yugoslavia grew tonight over the concordat between Yugoslavia and the Vatican.

The orthodox holy synod decreed punishment for every member of its church in Parliament and the government who voted for the concordat now before Parliament for ratification.

The cocordat was signed in 1933 by a previous Yugoslavian government.

Ratification by Parliament was delayed because the Serbian church authorities maintained it "granted unequally high power to the Catholic Church in the field of education and politics."

They pointed out that half of Yugoslavia is orthodox, while three-tenths of the population is Catholic.

Brazil Signs Gold Purchase Agreement With U. S.

Trains, Trucks Rush Japanese Into War Zone

Tientsin by railway. Japanese women and children were being evacuated from Peiping to the seacoast.

Gen. Gen Sugiyama, war minister, told an emergency session of provincial governors the North China crisis may take an even more serious turn at any moment. He urged the governors to adopt all possible measures to assist mobilization, if it should be ordered, and to place all resources at the disposal of the army.

Admiral Mistumasa Yonai, minister of the navy, announced dispositions of warships already had been made in South China waters as well as in the north to protect or evacuate Japanese nationals if necessary. Naval vessels also had been sent up the Yangtze River, he said, while units of the main fleet were held in readiness at home bases to sail for China trouble points if the need arose.

Foreign observers expressed belief the large-scale army and navy dispositions by Japan indicated she was determined to achieve a fundamental settlement of long-standing issues with China. Among these, according to the Chinese, is the establishment of an autonomous regime in the provinces of Hopei and Chahar, which would then be as completely severed from the rest of China as are the former Chinese provinces now constituting Japan's protectorate of Manchukuo.

Intervention Here Dashed.

Nanking, July 15 (AP).—Dispatches from Washington and London indicating there was little prospect of joint or separate American and British intervention in the China-Japan crisis tonight caused acute disappointment in Chinese official quarters.

Although no Nanking officials openly had expressed hope for such intervention, there had been much informal discussion of the possibility.

A spokesman for the Nanking government disclosed the central government is sending reinforcements to North China to support the Twenty-ninth Route Army in its resistance to the Japanese around Peiping. He withheld details, but said six divisions "are standing by somewhere in North China."

Pope's Letter Praises Catholic Youth Group

Paris, July 15 (AP).—Pope Pius XI praised the Catholic Working Youths' Organization today as opposed to "atheistic communism or pagan nationalism."

The pontiff, in a letter on the eve of a world congress of the movement here, described it as a "legion of militant youth, sworn to spread the Christian ideal of justice and charity." Founded in Belgium in 1925, the movement has more than 300,000 members.

Confidant of Stalin Arrives In Capital on Secret Mission held personally responsible for train wrecks or "sabotage."

His appointment to that important post was proof of the regime's faith in him. For transportation and defense are complementary. This point he stressed once when he said:

"We know the significance of transport in defense. We must be ready to defend the Soviet Union; the Red Army will do this. Transport's role in wartime is very vital."

As railroad commissar, he rallied to the defense of Stakhanovism (the speed-up movement), stating that it was "not a routine campaign of the day to fulfill the industrial and financial plan or to increase labor productivity" but that instead it was "a historic movement on a gigantic scale for Communist labor."

Always a colorful speaker, Kaganovich loves to stress the part played by socialism along Russia's road to progress. Thus, at the opening of Metro, Moscow's subway whose construction he had directed, he said:

"We faced great difficulties and we were told we could not build a subway. But revolutions produce people who refuse to understand the word 'impossible.' The England of Cromwell, the France of the revolution, and the America of Washington—all of them accomplished the so-called impossible. Our country has done the same under the leadership of Lenin and, during the last 11 years, of his greatest pupil, Stalin."

The former railroad commissar, who is now vice commissar for heavy industries, is credited with having conceived the idea of machine-tractor stations, watched over by Communist agents, for the purpose of guiding the collectivized peasants and consolidating the "agricultural revolution." He is also said to have lent his influence toward the liberation of literature and the arts.

Child, Man Drown In Va. Heat Wave

By the Associated Press.

A Richmond child and a 45-year-old colored man drowned in eastern Virginia yesterday, bringing the State's death toll attributed to the current heat wave to 22.

Harold Greenbaum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Greenbaum, of Richmond, drowned in Moore's Lake, a few miles from the city, shortly before 2 p. m. while bathing with his mother, a sister and a brother.

Ben Hudson, colored, of Williamsburg, drowned at Treasure Island Beach on the James River at about the same hour. James City County Coroner A. M. Snead said the man suffered an attack of "cramps" upon entering the water shortly after lunch.

structure of the nation and to meet the needs of its expanding economy."

The statement added that "the Secretary of the Treasury stands ready to supply such technical assistance as Brazil may care to avail itself of in connection with the organization of the new bank."

Treasury officials explained the mechanics of the gold sale as simple. Brazil already has dollar credits in New York, partly as a result of her favorable balance of trade with the United States. The gold, from this country's stock of $12,414,256,000, will be sent, as purchased, to the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and the Treasury will receive a check for the amount purchased, the receipts to go into the Treasury's general fund. They might be used, among various purposes, for paying off some of the Treasury bills issued in the purchase of gold "sterilized" by the Treasury.

To Advance Dollars.

When Brazil is provided with the gold, earmarked in the New York bank for it, the Treasury will advance dollars as required, using the gold as collateral.

Another statement, by the Secretary of State and the visiting finance minister, said the two countries declared their intention of continuing the reciprocal trade agreement, but recognized the advisability of safeguarding its principles and benefits "in view of the form of trading pursued by some other countries."

The statement did not mention Germany, but it has been contended in international trade circles Germany has been subsidizing exports, thereby increasing its sales to Brazil.

Barbossa Carneiro, speaking for the Brazilian mission yesterday, said the pact with Germany expired a month ago, but would be renewed. He said, in response to a question, the new agreement would not provide any expansion over the amount of trade set in the 1935 accord.

"Brazil," he said, "wishes to expand her trade with countries following the same policies as her own. With others, not following these policies, she wishes ot maintain her trade within certain limits which will not permit the displacement of trade in favor of such countries."

Russia Warns Foes Capitals in Range Of Attacks by Air

Moscow, July 15 (AP).—The Communist Party newspaper Pravda warned Soviet Russia's "enemies" today their capitals lie within easy range of Soviet war planes.

The warning, which pointed out the significance of two Soviet nonstop flights from Moscow to the American Pacific Coast, was believed by foreign observers to be addressed to Berlin and Tokyo. Both the Japanese and German capitals lie within 800 miles of Soviet air bases.

San Diego, Calif., July 15 (AP).—Soviet Russia's three record-smashing fliers went shopping today after high naval and Marine Corps officers honored them at luncheon.

The fliers, who had no room for extra clothing in the plane they landed yesterday in a cow pasture after a 6,262-mile flight from Moscow, bought suits and a quantity of haberdashery in which conservative colors predominated.

Their wardrobes replenished, the fliers—Pilot Mikhail Gromoff, Co-pilot Andrei Yumasheff and Navigator Sergei Danilin—were ready for another round of acclaim tomorrow at Los Angeles.

2 Caught in Gunfight In Tennessee Robbery

Linden, Tenn., July 15 (AP).—Within less than an hour after the First National Bank was held up today, Sheriff Van Dodson recovered the $5,500 loot and captured two men he had engaged in a pistol fight.

He gave their names as Oliver Adkins, about 50, and his nephew, Robert Adkins, about 30, a former clerk in the bank. The sheriff said they fired at him 11 times. The elder man surrendered and Robert Adkins, attempting to swim the Buffalo River, was shot and wounded by a posseman.

New Yorker Will Head Chicago's Hull House

New York, July 15 (AP).—Miss Charlotte E. Carr, executive director of the emergency relief bureau in New York, will resign her position here to become head of the famous Hull House social welfare institution in Chicago, it was announced today.

Miss Carr will take charge of the late Jane Addams' pioneer social work organization in August, it was stated, terminating her connection with the New York position which she has held since July, 1935.

Quezon Reveals Plan to Divide Great Holdings

Haciendas Will Be Split Into Small Farms, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth, arriving from Europe en route to Manila, said today he intends to sponsor legislation to divide the great estates of the Philippines among the common people.

"I am calling a special session of the National Assembly upon my return," said the leader of the Filipinos. "I will ask it to appropriate money collected from the excise tax on coconut oil to purchase some of the great haciendas of the Philippines and to create public works jobs for the underprivileged.

"In intend that the haciendas shall be cut up into small farms for the common people. We will expropriate the lands if necessary, but I know the estate owners are willing to sell.

Quezon said the Philippines were not concerned with the Sino-Japanese hostilities "except that all humanity should be interested in the cause of peace."

He said the present army program in the islands, as directed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff of the United States Army, was successful.

"We are not augmenting the army," he added. "We are merely giving our youth compulsory military training for six months."

The Ax Begins To Swing.

Apparently the political ax has already begun to swing against Democratic legislators who have opposed the Administration to pack the Supreme Court. After a visit to the White House, Gov. Townsend of Indiana made it plain that the New Deal organization in that State intends to throw Senator Van Nuys overboard in 1938.

Mr. Van Nuys came to the Senate as a New Dealer and consistently supported the Administration until the President asked Congress to place the Supreme Court under executive control. That was a policy he could not conscientiously support. Like many other Democrats in the Senate, he refused to truckle to political bosses where such a vital principle of American government was involved.

Attempts by high officials to win Senator Van Nuys over to the pro side of the court debate were ineffective. The Senator would rather cling to his principles than to his seat in Congress. For that courageous stand he will be rewarded by the respect of the Nation, in spite of anything the political bosses may do.

Being the present helmsman of the McNutt machine in Indiana, Gov. Townsend may be well informed as to the number of votes that can be delivered in 1938 to the candidate chosen to succeed Senator Van Nuys. But citizens of the Hoosier State may have opinions of their own as to the proposed punishment of a legislator simply because he failed to take orders from political bosses in Washington. Is it possible that Hoosiers are ready to run to cover in their own State because Jim Farley makes a face at the man they have sent to the Senate?

A still larger question is whether or not Senators who have combined forces to defeat the Administration's indefensible attack upon the courts will stand by and see their numbers picked off, one at a time, by the smooth-working Farley machine.

An Inadequate Stop-Gap.

Representative Kennedy's joint resolution to permit emergency loans to the District offers little comfort to this financially-distressed community. Ultimately such a measure may be essential to save the District from bankruptcy. But at present it appears that the energy of District officials might be far more profitably devoted to promotion of the tax bill before the Senate.

Apparently the House has no intention of acting on the Kennedy resolution until the next District day, July 26. In the meantime the tax bill could be adopted by the Senate and sent to conference. Since the Supreme Court fight has been interrupted by the death of Senator Robinson, it would be entirely reasonable for the Senate to pass the local tax bill before resuming that debate, even if the Administration is determined to go ahead with its futile controversy.

This course becomes especially desirable in view of the tangled legislative situation. One group on Capitol Hill is seeking an early adjournment regardless of what disposition is made of the court bill. Others favor quick action on the chief Administration bills. From all quarters comes the demand that the session be terminated at the earliest practicable moment. Under these circumstances, there is a real danger that a resolution permitting the District to borrow from the Treasury might serve as an excuse for pigeon-holing the tax bill.

On first thought it may appear that such action might work to the advantage of local taxpayers, because of the unsatisfactory nature of the tax bills thus far advanced. But that is not the case. Failure of Congress to provide new revenue would force the Commissioners to raise the tax on real estate and tangible personal property by 40 per cent. Since home owners are already overtaxed, that would impose on them an inexcusable burden.

Unless Congress intends to ignore its obligations as a city council for Washington, therefore, a tax bill must be passed. The sooner that problem is faced the better it will be for all concerned. Every day's delay means loss of revenue for the District and increases the danger of a deadlock on the eve of adjournment. Both sides in the court fight should welcome extension of the present truce as much as the District would welcome a solution of its financial dilemma.

Japan's Responsibility.

Adding insult to injury, the Japanese are demanding as the price of peace in North China that the problems arising out of the armed clashes of the past week be settled locally, that is, by the leaders of the Japanese Army and the local Chinese officials.

This is an invitation to the Nanking government to admit that its authority does not and must not extend over the region north of the Yellow River or, at least, over the provinces of Hopei and Chahar. It also constitutes a threat that if China refuses to sanction such a blow at its territorial integrity Japan will take the law into her own hands.

Whether the Chinese government will agree to such a humiliating condition and, in consequence, tacitly sanction the drastic concessions which the Chinese provincial authorities may be compelled to make is far from certain. In the past Chiang Kai-shek has pursued a Fabian policy in the face of Japanese aggressions. This time, however, the dispatch of reinforcements to the Japanese army already stationed in the Peiping-Tientsin area has been countered by orders to move large numbers of Chinese troops to the trouble zone. However eager Nanking may be to see peace maintained, its patience has apparently approached its limit.

Time was when the Japanese just about had their own way in North China. The penetration of the region immediately south of the Great Wall was largely unopposed. At that time further alienation of Chinese territory was forestalled, if only temporarily, by far-reaching Chinese concessions to Japan.

Now, apparently, the Japanese militarists are resuming where they left off. They are banking either on Nanking's unwillingness to fight a technically superior Japanese force, already firmly established in every available strategic point in the Peiping-Tientsin area, or on the inability of the Nanking government to wage a successful war against Japan. In other words, while the Japanese army leaders hope to bluff China into acquiescence, they appear to be willing to let the controversy come to a forcible showdown if China refuses to be bluffed.

It is this circumstance, plus the equally important fact that China is in no mood for any weak-kneed surrender to Japan, that makes the present situation so extremely dangerous. Engaged in a great task of national reconstruction, which has been succeeding in a very encouraging degree, China undoubtedly prefers peace to war. But the final choice rests not with her, but with Japan. Even the most peaceful nation will fight rather than submit to extinction.

The very gravest responsibility rests on both nations, but particularly on Japan, to avoid any action that would plunge the Far East into a bloody war. The possible extent and potential consequences of such a conflict can be viewed only with horror. The authorities at Tokyo would be making a very serious mistake, indeed, if they should take for granted the acquiescence of the outside world in any aggressive course in China.

Japan can ill afford to ignore the material interests of other powers that would be endangered by such hostilities. There is also involved in the present disturbed situation in the Peiping area the vastly greater stake of world peace. Is Japan prepared to unchain the lightning that might ultimately destroy her?

Financing A New Library.

For a number of years it has been obvious that Washington has outgrown its main public library. Aside from the fact that the city has shifted its axis so that the present building on Mount Vernon Square is now inconveniently situated, the population here has so increased that the library's facilities are woefully inadequate. Moreover, the design of the building does not lend itself to satisfactory alteration or enlargement.

In spite of this urgent need, proposals for a new library have aroused little enthusiasm because of the city's acute financial problem. Instead of having funds available for a new library, the District is confronted by a deficit amounting to approximately $7,000,000. Under these circumstances there seems to be no hope of securing a library in the near future through the regular budget.

Fortunately, however, a way around the obstacle of finances appears to have been found. Representative Collins, at the suggestion of the library trustees, has proposed an amendment to an act passed in 1934, which would permit the District to borrow $2,500,000 from the PWA for a new central library. The 1934 act fixed the limit of Washington's borrowing from PWA at $10,750,000. Some $6,000,000 of this sum has already been spent by the District to build a tuberculosis hospital, a sewage treatment plant and for improvements at Children's Hospital. It would be entirely reasonable to draw upon the remaining authorization for a new library, if the PWA still has funds available.

It may be argued that this potential credit should be utilized to finance a new jail or to complete the renovation of Lorton Reformatory or for the municipal center so long planned. These, beyond doubt, are worthy projects that some day must receive more adequate attention. Even if these improvements should be considered more urgent than a new library, however, it is well to remember that the District is not master of its own house. To a large extent it must accept what Congress is willing to approve. Certainly, then, if Congress is in a mood to authorize a PWA loan and grant to provide new library facilities, that project will be heartily indorsed by citizens of the District.

Practical Housing Suggestions.

The financing of slum reclamation and low-cost housing projects for families of low income gives rise to problems quite distinct from those confronting the private construction industry operating on a commercial basis. It should be obvious that the only way in which the housing problem can be solved for the overwhelming majority of Americans is through improved facilities for financing private construction and keeping costs on a reasonable level. Real encouragement may be found, therefore, in President Roosevelt's current proposal to bring more and better housing accommodation within the reach of tenants and prospective home-owners by these means.

The huge sums required to replace obsolete homes, provide for the growth and shifting of population, and keep abreast of progress have to be supplied for the most part from the savings of the people, not through public subsidies. To provide adequate housing accommodations, there must be an ample supply of capital available for building purposes at reasonable rates, and the completed structures must be offered for sale or rent at figures within the reach of those for whom they were intended.

As a result of the rising prices of building materials and increased labor costs the President complains that construction activity has declined in recent months. Home ownership, he warns us, is thus being discouraged. No doubt that is true, but a large part of the responsibility for this situation must be assigned to the Administration's own price-raising activities and labor policies.

Whatever the reasons for this lag in construction may be, however, it has stimulated interest in ways and means of financing low-cost housing projects. It has caused President Roosevelt to turn his attention from the plight of the home-owner to that of the tenant. The latter problem, as he points out, has become particularly serious in some congested industrial centers where wage-earners are forced to pay a disproportionately large percentage of their incomes to landlords.

With a view to stimulating construction of low-cost housing, therefore, the President has named a special group of Government experts to study the situation. Attention will be concentrated on the encouragement of limited-dividend housing corporations. This method of approach is much more promising than grandiose schemes for Federal subsidization of housing projects. Failure to differentiate between slum reclamation and commercially feasible low-cost private projects is one foremost reason why so little has been accomplished in either field to date.

The private limited-dividend corporation has proved to be a practicable method of keeping building costs at a minimum with reasonable returns to the builders and great saving to tenants. The FHA is empowered to insure first mortgages on property held by corporations "formed for the purpose of providing housing for persons of low income which are regulated or restricted by law or by the administrator as to rents, charges, capital structure, rate of return, or methods of operation." These mortgages need not conform to the general eligibility requirements for insurance. Projects may be insured up to $10,000,000.

There is, as the President states, a large volume of savings earning most inadequate returns today as a result of the Administration's policy of beating down interest rates. Some of that capital could no doubt be made available for use by limited-dividend housing corporations paying higher rates of interest. Although there is no reason to expect any spectacular results from this program, it provides encouraging evidence that the housing problem is at last being approached in a realistic, common-sense way.

Success Without Tears.

Don't tell your little boy about Lee Grissom. He's the living refutation of the theory that champions are only made by everlastingly sticking to it. At the moment he's known as the "one-man pitching staff" of the Cincinnati Reds. When his name fails to appear in a box score at least once every three days, it's news.

Before he was given a major league contract, he had never earned more than $1.50 a day in his life. It wasn't that he was unfitted for more—he just never wanted to try. Happily, however, a former bush league player saw him throw a ball one lazy afternoon. There was nothing lazy about its speed when Grissom happened to want to put his 200-pound frame behind it.

The older player offered him a job. But Grissom turned out to be so indifferent that the sponsor finally had to feed and clothe him gratis. For this the patron was ultimately rewarded by receiving a commission on the pitcher's sale price when a big league scout finally was induced to do business.

Success, however, has not reformed Grissom. Last winter he wanted to go from his home in upper California to San Francisco. A check of his finances showed resources totaling 50 cents. He had to "thumb" his way south. But when spring came and baseball training started, he was burning 'em over again and the money rolled in.

Burton, who wrote the "Anatomy of Melancholy," will probably turn in his grave at the mention of it, but there was never a more perfect example than Grissom of his line that "Idleness overthrows all."

Expansion Of An Idea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Great oaks from little acorns grow. Likewise no one can forecast the results of an idea. Nearly 15 years ago the Army Band gave a Pan-American concert under the patronage of the Pan American Union, featuring Latin-American music, exclusively. Immediately after the concert the undersigned wrote a letter to The Post expressing enthusiastic appreciation of the concert and suggesting continuance of the programs as a means of developing more cordial relations with our Latin-American neighbors, etc. As a result of that letter these concerts have become a permanent feature of Pan American Union activities, and are among the most enjoyable social and musical events in our Nation's Capital, and have contributed tremendously to a better understanding and feeling between our people and those to the south of us.

When the second concert was given, Mr. Adams, then counselor of the Pan American Union, in announcing the concert over the radio, read the letter and stated the concerts would become a regular feature. He also wrote the undersigned that the letter in question had been photographed and copies sent to all the South American countries with the result that the union had been supplied with an abundance of Latin-American music. He also stated to the undersigned, as did Capt. Stannard, of the Army Band, that but for the letter in question the concerts would not have been continued for certain reasons stated by them.

A few days ago the papers announced the inauguration of a new venture in the radio field, with a series of educational and cultural programs designed especially for Latin-American listeners and broadcast from this country through the short-wave facilities of the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation of Boston, which is sponsored by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, and Walter S. Lemmon, president of the foundation. It was stated that the series, a co-operative project of the union and the foundation, would be started in the early fall, with rebroadcasts of the same programs at later dates by stations throughout Latin America.

This is undoubtedly an expansion and outgrowth of the idea of the Latin-American musicales inaugurated nearly 15 years ago by the Pan American Union; and it is, indeed, gratifying to the undersigned that he had some little part in this matter that has had so beneficial an influence upon the relations of the peoples of this hemisphere.

Miss Earhart's Flight.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The other day when I picked up The Post and read the letter concerning Miss Earhart and her flight, written by Mr. Nairn, I thought to myself, "How can any 'warm-blooded' human being have the audacity to express such cold and heartless thoughts (publicly) toward another human?" When I picked up The Post of July 12 and read a letter signed "Exasperated," I simply saw red!

If Miss Earhart had successfully completed her flight, these individuals would have been the first to laud her.

"Exasperated" seems to think that nothing would have been accomplished had Miss Earhart completed her flight. Charles Lindbergh may not have accomplished much when he flew from New York to Paris; but think of the moral courage it gave to later fliers!

Could we humans, as a rule, have the courage to try what Miss Earhart attempted? Of course not, yet we are always ready to judge and condemn. HENRI BERNARD.

James Cardinal Gibbons.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Catholic people of America will pay tribute to the memory of the late James Cardinal Gibbons. This affair is to take place at Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, in front of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

James Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore and native-born Baltimorean, was one of the ten prelates who have presided over the mother diocese of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States.

It would scarcely be possible for the most discriminating of critics to name one of these ten dignitaries who was not endowed with eminent abilities and personal qualities which rendered them conspicuous even among the members of a hierarchy chosen with singular care by acute judges of men.

Cardinal Gibbons, however, possessed certain characteristics, difficult to define with words, which impressed him upon the minds, and largely upon the hearts of the people of his diocese, his State and his Nation, and also of the world at large.

It was not his mentality, his learning, or his executive ability; other archbishops of Baltimore have been his equal, and some of them his superior, in one or more of these endowments.

It was not his pretentiousness; to James Gibbons might fairly be applied the words which Maryland's Catholic poet laureate applied to his native State—"bravely meek."

And yet today, 16 years after his death, as on the day of his golden jubilee as a churchman, men of all creeds, Christians, Jews and even agnostics, are uniting in honoring his memory and in doing obeisance at his tomb.

A "Marathon" Victim.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Had President Roosevelt immediately after the resignation of Mr. Justice Van Devanter from the Supreme Court appointed Senator Robinson to fill the vacancy, there would have been practically no opposition to his confirmation so great had been the esteem in which he was held by his colleagues even including the Republican minority. This would have fulfilled the honorable personal ambition of Senator Robinson.

As the Supreme Court wisely vacationed during the torrid heat of the Washington summer, the Senator who has so suddenly and sadly gone into the vale of death might instead now be refreshing himself, as he is said to have planned, with a tour abroad. He might then have lived on to a ripe old age—becoming himself in course of time one of those "nine old men" of the Supreme Court, instead of passing away in the prime of life.

But instead he is now apparently a victim of the marathon endurance test forced on Congress in the heat of summer by President Roosevelt's insistent demand the court-packing bill be passed if it takes all summer. The second court-packing bill should have been referred like the first to the Senate Judiciary Committee, and with no need of a report until winter when both the weather and tempers would have been cooler.

It has been cruel and dangerous to the personnel of Congress to compel such a foolish marathon. There is a grave risk of still other tragedies to health and life if the marathon continues all through the summer. Congress ought now to give up at least any immediate plan of packing the court, which seems strongly deprecated, not demanded, by most sensible people. Instead, trunks should be packed for a vacation. Incidentally that would give a breathing spell to business, and impetus to recovery now lagging.

Reply To "W. H. P."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read the article sent in to you by W. H. P. on the repeal of section 213. Without being informed, I would guess that this writer is a man, as the attitude is so entirely mannish.

To quote W. H. P., "When a man and woman marry they are supposed in the natural order of things to establish a home, of which the man is the head." I agree that they are. But to be fair to all one must take the small-salaried man into consideration. I would like to ask if W. H. P. ever tried "to establish a home" in the city on, say, $25 a week, even without children, and children, of course, wouldn't make it any easier.

Many wives are more concerned with getting jobs than with caring for their homes. I agree with this also, but many of these wives' real aspiration is a home and children or a home and means of educating their children. They don't mind working outside the home to gain their desires, either. For this I think they should be given a hand. The right kind of husband is deeply appreciative of his wife's help, and will co-operate by assisting her in the care of the home or, perhaps I should say, as too often is the case, "rooms." S. A.

Taxicab Liability Insurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A powerful lobby has just succeeded in pushing a taxicab liability insurance bill through the House of Representatives.

This bill is not for the benefit of the public. It is for the purpose of creating a monopoly for the big fellows while forcing the little fellows out of business. In addition, it will raise taxicab rates in the District. Insurance companies demand $30 per month premium per cab. The new bill permits the big fellows to merely put up a bond.

The adoption of the following plan would give all necessary protection to the public, would not necessitate a raise of rates, and would save the livelihood of the little fellows, and by that I mean the men who own and operate their own cabs:

1. Have Congress appropriate $50,000 from the revenue of the District of Columbia as a revolving fund.

2. Require each taxicab to pay $5 per month into that fund, said fund to be used to insure payments of judgments for injuries suffered by taxicab passengers.

3. Whenever said reserve fund drops below $30,000 the amount to be paid by each taxicab to be automatically increased to $10. If it drops below $20,000 the amount to be paid by each taxicab to be increased to $15 per month. Thus careful driving would be rewarded by the minimum assessment.

4. Whenever the said reserve fund reaches $60,000 all over that amount to be paid to the treasury of the District of Columbia to repay the initial $50,000 appropriated for the revolving fund.

FRANK G. CAMPBELL.
Washington, July 13.

To the Editor of The Pos—Sir: I wish to commend you for your editorial "Insurance for Taxis," in The Post of July 14. It shows that you understand the situation and know what is for the best interests of the people of the District.

Legislation enabling the Public Utilities Commission to reduce the number of taxicabs in the streets and to require financial responsibility on the part of operators has been before the Congress for five years, but has failed of enactment. The excuse given has been that it will make it necessary to raise taxicab fares. It will undoubtedly do so.

We have irresponsible taxicab service and are paying no more for it than it is worth. Certain fleets claim to have a measure of financial responsibility, voluntarily imposed, but how responsible they really are is problematical. It is outside the jurisdiction of the P. U. C. All taxicabs should be required to have it under governmental regulation. The administration of it offers some difficult problems, but the P. U. C. is quite able to handle them.

Scholarship And Success

Following are excerpts from an address delivered at Wesleyan University by Edwin M. Kemmerer, professor of international finance at Princeton:

FIRST, let us consider the college man's chances of success as compared with those of the noncollege man. On this subject there have been a number of studies.

In 1903, Dr. Charles F. Thwing published the results of a study of this subject based upon 15,142 names in Appleton's "Encyclopedia of American Biography." Broadly speaking, his conclusion was that one out of every 40 college graduates succeeded and one out of every 10,000 nongraduates. This gave a ratio of 250 to 1 in favor of the college man.

Of course, this study refers to conditions as they existed some time ago. A larger percentage of the public receives a college education now than did a few generations ago, and it is possible that this may be resulting in important changes in the quality of the graduates that the colleges are turning out. In 1880 there were 687 male college graduates for every 100,000 males in the country over 20 years of age. By 1920 this figure had risen to 1,137. Some light on the present situation is given by studies recently made on the basis of the 1928-29 and the 1934-35 editions of "Who's Who in America."

For both these years approximately three-fourths of all the names mentioned were for college graduates, and approximately 85 per cent for collegians, graduates and nongraduates combined. Persons whose education was limited to the common and elementary schools represented only 6 2-3 per cent of these names in the former edition and 7 1-6 per cent in the latter. This is true despite the fact that the number of college graduates in the United States is a very small figure compared with the number of adults whose school education ended prior to the college grade. Furthermore, the figures show that from 1900 to 1934-35, the percentage of names in "Who's Who in America" represented by collegians continually increased. At the present time, therefore, as in the past, the college man seems to have a very much better chance of succeeding than the noncollege man.

In the Harvard Law School there has long been a jocular saying among students that those with A grades become the professors of law, those with B grades the judges, and those with C grades make the money. As a matter of fact there is no evidence to support this idea—the evidence in reality is exactly to the contrary. Those with A grades are much more successful than those with B or C grades in attaining eminence as professors, judges and lawyers and those with B grades are more successful than those with C grades. The competition of the country's leading law firms for the highest-stand men in our best law schools is usually very keen. These are the men who get the best professional opportunities at the beginning of their law practice and the ones who advance the fastest.

Furthermore, it is the men with the high academic standing in college who become the high-stand men in the professional schools. The scholar in college is likely to be the scholar in law school, in medical school and in schools of engineering, and the "dub" in college, if he is admitted to the graduate professional school at all, is likely to be the dub there. And this principle not only applies in the movement from the college to the professional school, but also in the movement from the preparatory school to the college.

Why should the man of high scholarship in college be more likely to succeed than the man of low scholarship? I do not know, but I will give you my guess.

Assuming that the three different classes, high-honor men, honor men and the "all other" group, rank the same in the essentials of good health, good morals, personality, and ability to get along with men—and I see no reason for believing that they would differ materially in these respects—then the class that is most likely to succeed is the one that excels in brains, industry and common sense.

By and large, the high-stand men are probably the men with the best brains. There are many exceptions. We have all known brilliant men in college whose academic standing was low because they wasted their time, and we have known men of mediocre brains who stood high because they worked hard. The man with the best brain, however, certainly has an advantage when it comes to academic standing.

The next important quality is industry, "the capacity to everlastingly dig," to overcome handicaps by hard work, to do things well and to see one's task through to the finish. "If you have genius," Sir Joshua Reynolds said, "industry will improve it; if you have none, industry will supply its place."

Finally, there is the quality which goes under the much-abused term, "common sense." Emerson called it "the shortest line between two points." By common sense we mean a good sense of proportions, ability to see big things big and little things little. This quality likewise is more pronounced among high-group men than among low-group men.

Writes of Hitch-Hiking to a Job

A Town Finds McCarthy A Job

DE SOTO, KANS., JULY 13.—Leaving Emporia, Kans., after my chat with William Allen White and my futile attempts to pick up more than a few hours work, I retraced my steps toward Kansas City, heading for the Kaw Valley. I had heard that workers were in demand there to harvest potatoes.

TOM McCARTHY.

I arrived in the little town of De Soto, Kans., at dusk, given a ride into town by Mr. Linden, the milkman. Within two hours half of Main street had been enlisted in the task of getting me a job. Mr. Linden, the milkman; Greenberry Paxton, who was in great measure responsible for the whole thing; Johnny Gordon, who ran the restaurant; Lester, the boy behind the counter in the restaurant next door; Mr. Cobler, the milkman on the morning route; the man at the filling station; and lastly, the town marshal.

• • • •

IT WAS Mr. Linden who first broke the bad news, as we were jouncing down the hills in his milk truck, on the way to De Soto.

"I've heard that I might get a job over here in Kaw Valley in the potato harvest," I told him.

"There ain't no potato harvest," he snorted, "leastways, not yet."

"Why, somebody told me they were crying for hands over here," I told him.

"Yeah, you'll find a lot of people going around spieling such nonsense," he said. "If there's been any crying over here, it's been the crying of the farmers over what the market has done to potatoes."

"What's it done?" I asked him.

"What's it done!" he growled, "the price on potatoes has slipped from $1.75 to 60 cents, in the last ten days. That's what the cryin's about."

"And so there aren't any jobs?"

"No jobs! Then he amended this with, "They're going to leave them in the ground for a while yet, anyway. There might be some jobs later, but not now."

• • • •

MR. LINDEN let me off at the main square of the town. It could be identified as a main square because the roads which crossed each other at that point were both paved. I went over and sat on an expanse of lawn which sloped down to the main street. I turned to my neighbor.

"I hear there's no potato harvest this year."

"Not for a while yet," he said.

"Stranger?" he asked, dragging deliberately at his pipe.

"Yes," I said, "and I came here looking for a job. I figured I might get something in the potato harvest."

"We ought to be able to get you one," he said simply. "Stick around."

I sat there quietly enough, watching the small drift of farmers up and down the single block which was Main street.

"Seen much of the country on your trip?"

"Parts of seven States," I told him.

"Been to college?" he asked suddenly.

I told him I had, thinking it a peculiar question.

"I could see you weren't no 'vag'," he said.

Suddenly he snapped his fingers, and said, "I've got it. Go over to that restaurant. Tell Johnny Gordon that Greenberry Paxton sent you. Tell him that you want to get a job on some farm around here."

• • • •

WITHOUT any questioning, I did as I was told. Johnny Gordon was a slender old man, with a kindly ascetic face, and when I told him Green Paxton had sent me, he went to the phone and called a number.

"Hey Tod," he said, "you wanted me to get you some hands. Well I already got the two you wanted but there's another one here now."

"I'll work hard and cheaply," I whispered.

"He won't cost you much, Tod." He turned, covering the mouthpiece with his hand, "Can you drive a team?"

"No," I said, "but I can do anything else."

"He says he can do anything," Johnny shouted into the mouthpiece.

"If he doesn't like my work, he can fire me," I said.

"Won't cost you anything to give him a try, Tod, and if he won't do, fire him. No, he's no tramp. Yes, he's a stranger." Johnny turned quickly and asked, "What's your name?" and then turning to the mouthpiece shouted, "Says his name's 'McCarthy'—yes 'McCarthy.' O. K., Tod, he'll be up in the morning."

Johnny hung up triumphantly.

"What kind of work am I going to do?" I asked.

"You'll shock wheat," he said.

I returned to Green Paxton and told him that I'd got a trial. We sat there talking about various things, and as a man passed by on the sidewalk, Green called him over. "Mr. Cobler—I want you to meet . . . What's your name? . . . Mr. McCarthy. He's going to work for Tod tomorrow. Can you give him a ride up to the farm on the milk truck."

A nod denoted Mr. Cobler's consent.

• • • •

I STROLLED across the street with Green and he called to a young man lounging in front of a lunch room and beer parlor, "Lester, this young man is hungry. Give him some food. He'll pay you later."

"O. K." said Lester.

When I came out of the restaurant, Green was sitting on the curb puffing at his pipe.

"The boy down at the service station, will let you sleep there tonight," he said. "It means the town marshal will have to find another place to hang out for a night, but he can stand it."

When I went to the service station, the attendant had already stretched out a trapaulin on the cement floor in the rear of the building.

"I'll wake you at 5," he said, very simply accepting my presence.

Before I dropped off to sleep, I asked him, "Who is this Green Paxton? Does he own the town? Is he a retired farmer?"

"No," he said, "he just works around here. Been here all his life. Everybody knows Green Paxton."

Breach Of Taste.

So far as I am known at all, I am known as a whole-hearted believer in the friendliest relations between England and the United States, both in large and in small affairs. Therefore I dislike to see in print observations that are sure to irritate those who are sensitive, and which could not possibly result in any advantage to men and women of either country. Let me add that personally I don't care a rap; I do not believe that our country will suffer any more from condescension than the home of our ancestors will suffer from defiance.

• • • •

Now compliments are always opportune; there is no bad time to express agreeable sentiments. But remarks the reverse of complimentary often show not only bad taste, but sometimes indicate a positive genius for the inopportune.

A book on lawn tennis has just been published, prepared by an Englishman who for 18 years has been referee of the annual tennis tournament at Wimbledon. An English review of the book compliments this gentleman on his skill in adjusting many human problems and on his tact, as follows:

"Among minor problems calling for tactful solution we may cite the expostulation of a youthful American star: "Say, when're you goin' to put me on that center court of yours? You just better get me on there soon—I gotta lot o' new things to show these people!"

Raw Materials

Discussions In Geneva Subdued By Non-Appearance Of Italy And Germany; Influence Of Politics Apparent.

By C. Poznanski.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE COMMITTEE for the study of the problem of raw materials held its second session in Geneva at the end of June. The results of this session are far from outstanding. The committee could not agree on a report. Two subcommittees prepared some preliminary drafts and the committee decided to meet again on September 1.

An interim report expressed the hope "that after this September session the committee may be able to submit a report in time for the discussion at the 1937 assembly of the eLague, oNtwithstanding the meagerness of the results of this session, however, its lessons are important and well worth examining.

It was discussed in Paris during the negotiations of the peace treaties.

In 1920 the International Federation of Miners adopted unanimously a resolution favoring the establishment of "an international office for the distribution of fuel, ores and other raw materials essential to the renewal of the normal economic life of all nations."

The problem reappeared in the discussions of the international finance conference in 1920, in those of the first assembly of the League of Nations in 1920, at the international economic conference in 1927, and at the monetary and economic conference in 1933.

Speech By Hoare Originated Committee.

THESE DISCUSSIONS have only an academic interest today. It was a speech by Sir Samuel Hoare at the League Assembly in 1935 which was the origin of the present committee, and it is in relation to this speech that the work of the committee must be considered.

Sir Samuel said that it is not enough to prevent war but "something must be done to remove the causes from which war is apt to arise." It was on the basis of this statement that Sir Samuel Hoare asked the League to investigate the problem of raw materials, a problem which in his opinion was "economic rather than political or territorial." And the then Foreign Minister of Great Britain concluded, "the emphasis in the terms of reference should fall upon the free distribution of such raw materials amongst industrial countries which require them, so that any fear of exclusion or monopoly may be removed once and for all."

He insisted that the inquiry "should be limited in this case to raw materials from colonial areas including protectorates and mandated territories." The reasons which determined his attitude were not economic but political. The facilities to be accorded to the countries which complained of the difficulties of access to raw materials were to preclude their demands for other changes.

Sir Samuel had only raised the question of principle. It was not until January, 1937, that the League Council after a report by M. Beck, Foreign Minister of Poland, appointed the committee which met first in March, 1937.

By that time, however, the political background which had led to its constitution had completely changed. Four nonmember states—the United States, Japan, Germany and Brazil—were invited to send experts. The committee is set up as a committee of independent experts, not of official government representatives. In fact, of course, these experts did not represent the opinions of their respective governments. Germany refused to send an expert, as did Italy. This fact overshadowed the whole work.

Sir Samuel Extended Olive Branch To 'Have-Nots.'

SIR SAMUEL HOARE'S speech was intended to be an olive branch to the outstanding "have-not" nations. It was made at the beginning of the Ethiopian campaign and its principal objective was by promises of economical adjustments to prevent this war waged by Italy officially to obtain her share in raw materials of this world. This objective was not attained. Ethiopia had been conquered in 1936.

But there remained the hopes of an understanding with Germany through the discussion of the problem of raw materials. These hopes failed as well. Herr von Neurath frankly explained to one of the foreign ministers that he would not send an expert to Geneva, because the Reich did not want to tie its hand by accepting a discussion. And just before the meeting of the committee, German propaganda for the return of German colonies was intensified.

Under these circumstances the British policy at the committee meetings could no longer be the discussion of the grievances of the "have-nots." It had to be, and was, an emphatic "no" to the two absent countries. In the March session the British expert, Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, made it emphatically and abundantly clear that Great Britain was not prepared to make any concession either to Germany or to Italy; that it would never accept the raising of the question of the redistribution of colonial or mandated territories; that in his opinion the complaints of the "have-nots" were due only to their own policy.

He insisted—and this insistence is particularly remarkable in view of the statement of Sir Samuel Hoare—that the inquiry of the committee should be limited to raw materials of colonial origin, that the raw materials problem was not a colonial one, for the essential raw materials do not come from colonies but from the territories of independent states. As a result, in the conclusions of the March report this statement appears:

"The committee agreed that all question of distribution and transfer of colonial territories lay quite outside its competence; it had only to do with the question of the distribution of raw materials."

Committee Reconvened Omitting Study Of Colonies.

NOTWITHSTANDING this purely negative attitude the committee decided to meet again in June to deal in detail with the question on the basis of government memoranda and of statistics.

Two subcommittees were set up. The first dealt with exports, restrictions, export duties, the exploitation of natural resources, international regulation schemes and monopolies; the second with difficulties of payment.

The discussions were meant to be technical and they were so. Nevertheless the same political reasons which led to an impasse in the first session continued to dominate. Great Britain considered that concessions could be made only if there was a quid pro quo in a political appeasement. The general trend of the argument was that there were no difficulties in access to raw materials, for the countries which possessed them were eager to find buyers. It was insisted that the prohibitions of exports and export duties were quite insignificant, that the difficulties of payment were due to the policy of the countries which instituted the control of their currency.

The political side of this argument appeared quite clearly when Sir Frederick Leith-Ross declared that the nations who pretend to have grievances will have to surrender not only their economic policy of autarchy, but also their "patriotic" policy, if they want international collaboration to appease their grievances.

To Japan, which brought a concrete proposal of an open-door policy in the colonies on the lines of the policy applied in territories under mandate and in the basin of the Congo, the British and Dutch experts replied that there could be no question of it. They justified their refusal by the interests of the natives.

In spite of this negative attitude which prevailed in June as well as in March, and which precludes the possibility of any large agreement as a result of the September session, it is not impossible that some small adjustments may finally come out of the discussions.

As for the United States delegate, Mr. Grady, the political and colonial aspects of the question were more or less outside of his sphere. What he insisted upon was the general question of the necessity of lowering trade barriers, which interests the United States as a country both exporting and importing raw materials. It was the question of the control of exchanges, which may sometimes be necessary to protect national currency, but which too often is considered as a commercial weapon to strangle imports. And necessarily in the discussions arose the question of imperial preferences.

But the principal lesson of the discussions and the most important was that nowadays politics dominate economics, that no major economic question may be really resolved until the intense political unrest of Europe is appeased.

Cost Of War

By

Carlton Brown

"Every War Is A Racket."

The following is reprinted from a recent issue of The Fight:

WE MIGHT OBSERVE our twentieth Army Day by casting an eye on the record of the current armaments race which threatens to embroil us in another conflict at any moment. As such a military authority as Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler has pointed out, "It's not physically possible for 1,000,000 men to enter this country. Every war is a racket, using young suckers." That we are preparing ourselves for another such "racket" as the last war is indicated by the fact that our armaments appropriation for this year hits a new high in peacetime "defense" budgets. During the years immediately preceding the World War, our armaments budget steadily followed the mounting surge of war hysteria. In the three war years of 1917-18, 1918-19 and 1919-20, our naval appropriations totaled $4,218,251,088, and after dropping to a peacetime level, the naval bill began to climb from the low of $317,495,316 of 1925-26 to the peak of $518,625,222 of 1935-36.

The expenditures of the War Department (Army) throughout these years have remained fairly stable, at around $400,000,000.

Can we trace a significant parallel between the expenditures of the immediate prewar years and those of 1935, 1936 and 1937, which are, respectively, $279,433,582, $445,900,069, and a sum for this year which will exceed the $500,000,000 mark?

• • • •

OUR POLICY, since the abandonment of the limitations treaties, continues to be parity with Great Britain, an empire whose extensive colonial holdings give it an infinitely greater justification for a heavy defense program than we have.

This year will see our Army raised to an enlistment of 165,000 men, in contrast to its 1914 force of 87,000, and the Navy to 100,000. Though these figures may be advanced as our race to maintain equality with Great Britain grows more strenuous, the Army is constructing 800 new planes this year, as the first part of a five-year program calling for 4,000 new planes. At the same time, the Navy will build a total of 433 new planes this year. On January 1, 1937, there were in construction 95 Navy vessels.

Our figures have not included such subsidiary military forces as the R. O. T. C., the C. M. T. C., the CCC, nor funds diverted from relief sources for military purposes. Apart from the staggering load of war-created public debt, we have an annual pension bill which has steadily climbed from $160,895,053 in 1917, to a peak of $550,559,342 in 1933, after which it declined slightly. In addition, the soldiers' bonus bill provided for the issuance, in June, 1936, of $1,728,858,100 in bonus bonds.

• • • •

THE DIRECT gross costs of the World War to the United States have been estimated at $32,080,266,986. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has made a graphic demonstration of the cost of the last war to the world. He finds that the World War cost 30,000,000 lives and $400,000,000,000 in property.

"If that $400,000,000,000 had been put to constructive use, it would have built a $2,500 house and furnished this house with $1,000 worth of furniture, and placed it on five acres of land worth $100 an acre and given all this to each and every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia.

"After doing this," the report continues, "there would have been enough money left to give each city of 20,000 inhabitants and over in all the countries named a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university.

"And then out of the balance we would still have sufficient money to set aside a sum of 5 per cent interest which would pay for all time to come a $1,000 yearly salary each for an army of 125,000 teachers and in addition to this pay the same salary to each of an army of 125,000 nurses.

"And after having done all this, we could still have enough left out of our $400,000,000,000 to buy up all of France and Belgium, and everything of value that France and Belgium possess; that is, every French and Belgian farm, home, factory, church, railroad, streetcar—in fact, everything of value in those two countries in 1914!"

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Interviews.

Q. Mr. Montague, do you admit that you had spots in your life which you tried to hide?

A. Do you know any golfer who hasn't?

Q. During the seven years you were in California, did you always use an alias?

A. Yes, and if golfers could get a slant at their backswings they'd all use aliases.

• • • • •

Q. Were you always a long hitter?

A. I must have been. I checked up on it and found that my drives went half as far as the magazine and newspaper said.

Q. What do you consider the best feature of your game?

A. Up to this minute I always thought it was keeping out of trouble.

• • • • •

Q. Were you always worried by the hazard of detection hanging over your head?

A. Yes. That's why I never looked up on any shots.

• • • • •

Q. How do you reconcile your desire for privacy with your frequent appearances with Bing Crosby and other radio, picture and publicity stars in touch with nation-wide audiences?

A. That's what puzzles me. Now that I think it over I could have got quicker results through Winchell.

• • • • •

Q. What is the charge against you?

A. Robbing a roadhouse.

Q. That's not a crime; it's a miracle. You should get a medal.

A. If it's all the same to you I'd rather have a cup.

• • • • •

Q. Has it seemed an ordeal to be in hiding seven years?

A. No. Lots of golfers have been lost longer than that. The only difference was that in my case I wasn't looking for a ball.

• • • • •

Q. No fooling, how far can you really drive a golf ball?

A. All I know is what I read in the papers and periodicals. It seems I get 380 yards in the big dailies, 400 yards in the country weeklies and 600 yards in the national magazines.

Q. Do you think distance is important?

A. I did until this thing happened.

• • • • •

Q. There is a rumor that the New York police were slow in catching up with you because the course was crowded. Did you know they were following you?

A. No. I always wave anybody through when I'm holding them up.

• • • • •

Q. Well, Mr. Montague, you seem to have the best wishes of millions of people in this affair.

A. Yes. How do you explain that?

Q. Probably the country realizes how far it might go if this idea of locking up golfers gets any headway. By the way, do you regret now that when you first came into national prominence as a golfer you didn't confess everything?

A. Yes, but how can the public tell whether a golfer is confessing or just boasting?

The Way Out.

The United States and China have signed an agreement to barter gold and silver in the hope it will help straighten out each other's financial worries. Chinese was the only language the Democrats could find in which America's economic problem could be discussed without embarrassment.

There is talk of having but one newspaper for all Italy. You get three guesses as to the publisher and editor.

Soviet Russia has shown it is a simple matter to fly from Moscow to the United States by plane, so don't say you weren't warned.

Freedom in U.S. Is Being Stolen, Catholics Told

Nation Becoming Totalitarian State, Archbishop McNicholas Says.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 15.—Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of the Cincinnati Catholic Archdiocese, declared today that "some sitting in our courts of justice even the supreme tribunal of the United States, reject the very idea of natural law," and "we are becoming, without realizing it, a totalitarian state."

In a letter sent to pastors the prelate added:

"A great struggle is going on in our country today. It seems next to impossible to change the outlook of industrialists and capitalists who believe in economic slavery."

He named a group of priests to "stand by, ready at all times to assist labor," and counselled them to "do all they can in giving sane direction to laboring groups."

Speaking of industrialists and capitalists, Archbishop McNicholas declared:

"They cannot understand that capital is entitled to a fair return on its investment and nothing more.

Some Judges Condemned.

"To speak of fundamental justice and of the dignity of human nature and of human labor is simply to speak a language they do not understand. They do not accept fixed and immutable principles of justice. Good business to them means accumulating as much money as one can and the acquiring of that power which comes with money. All of this must be done in such a way as to avoid the penalties of the law."

"Some sitting in our courts of justice, even in the supreme tribunal of the United States," continued the prelate, "reject the very idea of the natural law which is founded on the divine and eternal law of God, and which means unchanging standards of morality governing society."

Labor Gains Cited.

Labor, the church leader asserted, "is beginning to gain strength. It lacks, however, that leadership which can inspire a general confidence in its objectives and in its conduct. It is important that labor gets a fair hearing . . . that labor organizations be everywhere formed . . ."

"All who have the good of society at heart," he added, "should do what is humanly possible to form a sane public opinion on the functions of government. We are becoming, without realizing it, a totalitarian state. We are talking much about the liberties of men, while at the same time government is stealing the freedom of the sons of God that is their inalienable right by Nature's laws."

Chief Justice Hikes 3 Miles Daily at Mountain Retreat

Littleton, N. H., July 15 (AP).—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, now an ardent hiker over nearby White Mountain trails, has set himself a 3-mile daily stint while resting from the cares of the Supreme Court.

Hotel clerks and telephone operators act as his secretaries in fending off visitors.

To all outward appearances, at least, the Chief Justice has been paying but little attention to the Congressional controversy in Washington over the Supreme Court, now temporarily lulled. In fact, his only public statement on that subject since arriving here has been a monosyllabic "No."

Md. Court Erases Tax Exemptions

Annapolis, July 15 (AP).—The court of appeals wiped out today certain exemptions allowed share corporations on their stock in order to remove alleged discrimination against Federal securities.

The court's decision directed that stocks of share corporations—banks, trust companies and public service concerns of Maryland—must be rated at their full value for taxable purposes. It eliminated exemptions that had been claimed since 1908.

The ruling grew out of a suit the Fidelity & Guaranty Fire Corporation instituted against the State tax commission to claim exemption for Federal securities it held. The corporation contended the exemptions in question discriminated against the Federal securities.

Texts on U. S.-Brazil Pacts

Following is the joint statement on gold purchases made by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Minister of Finance Costa of Brazil:

The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States of America and the Minister of Finance of the United States of Brazil are entering into an agreement under which:

1. The United States undertakes to sell gold to Brazil at such times and in such amounts as the Brazilian government may request, up to a total of $60,000,000;

2. The United States will make dollar exchange available to the government of Brazil or its fiscal agent, under conditions which safeguard the interests of both countries, for the purpose of promoting exchange equilibrium.

The agreement is designed to promote the development of conditions favorable to the maintenance of monetary equilibrium between the two countries and to facilitate the establishment by the United States of Brazil of a central reserve bank as a part of the program of the Brazilian government for improving the financial structure of the nation to meet the needs of its expanding economy.

In recent years there has occurred a notable improvement of the trade and financial position of Brazil. It is a matter of gratification both to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Finance Minister that this favorable development of the Brazilian economy makes feasible at this time this important step.

Both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Minister of Finance are pleased to have had this opportunity to extend the field of co-operation between their countries and, in accordance with their conversations, the Secretary of the Treasury stands ready to supply such technical assistance as Brazil may care to avail itself of in connection with the organization of the new bank.

• • • •

The following joint statement is made by the Secretary of State and the Minister of Finance of Brazil:

The commercial agreement negotiated between the United States and Brazil was the first accord—apart from the agreement between the United States and Cuba—signed under the authority of the trade agreements act. Under the agreement each country by lowering various tariff restrictions prepared the way for an increase in trade between them. Further, by exchanging pledges against the increase in existing duties or the application of new duties on many products vital in their trade they safeguarded their existing trade.

The specific trade concessions were no more important from a long range view, than the type of agreement that was negotiated and the type of trade policy to which the two governments committed themselves in this agreement. It is based on the mutual exchange of most-favored-nation pledges which guarantee that the products of each country should find opportunity in the markets of the other on terms no less favorable than the products of any other country. The underlying meaning of this pledge is a broad one; to wit, that both countries gain reciprocal assurance of both the form and substance of equality of treatment, and that the trade relations between them and the rest of the world may be enabled to develop with that protection.

The agreement has been operative for almost two years. It was both natural and desirable that advantage be taken by the principals of the Brazilian Mission in this country to review its past operations and its prospects. This had been done in a series of comprehensive discussions in which both countries have freely explained their positions and their problems. As these conversations come to an end the two governments declare their intention of continuing the agreement in force and of bending every effort toward the attainment of its objectives. Experience has demonstrated that a number of minor complementary measures are advisable in order to safeguard its principles and benefits in view of the form of trading pursued by some countries. Accordingly, they undertake to protect these principles and benefits against outside competition that is directly subsidized by governments.

The high convenience was furthermore recognized of the creation of two joint Brazilian-American committees composed of representatives of the trade interests of the two countries. One will be established in Rio de Janeiro, and the other in New York or Washington, with the purpose of studying the best means indicated for developing trade between Brazil and the United States, and of securing, within the commitments mutually entered into by the Government of Brazil and the Government of the United States in the commercial agreement of February 2, 1935, the most appropriate solutions in order to overcome the obstacles which might hinder the natural development of trade between the two countries.

These two joint committees will have independent standing, and the obligation of reporting to the two governments. They will be guided entirely by the wish to foster trade between the two countries. The two governments are convinced that this innovation in commercial arrangements between the two countries, suggested by the President of Brazil, will provide the basis of experience useful to them both.

The discussion also dealt with certain minor administrative customs regulations, bearing upon the operation of the agreement. The Brazilian mission has undertaken to give full and prompt study to certain of these regulations with a view toward simplifying or modifying them as may be found necessary. This would complete the substantial improvement of customs administration already made effective by the Brazilian government.

Slums Raise Taxes In City, Says Ihlder

Need for elimination of more alley dwellings and substitution of low-rent housing for poorer citizens was stressed yesterday by John Ihlder, chairman of the Alley Dwelling Authority, in a talk before the Cosmopolitan Club. Ihlder declared the low-rent housing problem is one with which the Government must cope because values are such that private industry could not handle it except at a loss.

He called attention to the large number of alley dwellings and slums in Washington. These properties, he said, are a loss to the city because taxpayers must pay more for city service in these sections than is returned in taxes. The second precinct alone, he said, costs the taxpayers a half million dollars more than is returned in tax funds.

Following the meeting Mr. Ihlder held a forum answering questions on housing conditions. He was introduced by William Edelblut, chairman of the forum committee.

Orders Received For Two Awnings For Dogs at Pound

Shade for the District's homeless dogs was in sight yesterday as The Post Pound Fund was swelled by $5 and a Washington company received orders for two awnings, to be paid for by a woman who wished to be an anonymous giver.

Showers brought temporary relief to the approximately 65 dogs in the pound pens. The two awnings ordered yesterday probably will be up Monday or Tuesday. The Post fund will go toward purchase of at least one more big shade piece, which Poundmaster Frank B. Marks has said the pound needs.

Marie Campbell and Hazel Reynolds of the Air Corps Division, War Department, said they were heading a drive in their office, and another prospective donor was going to visit the pound and then "help with anything else needed."

Reported to The Post since the Monday story of two deaths of dogs from the heat have been: Almost $8 collected in the budget and finance section of the Department of Agriculture; $5 from Mrs. Julia L. Hyde, of the Wyoming Apartments, and $5 from "L. G."

Diners and Dancers Kept Cool by Up-to-Date Air-Conditioners.

By Chanticleer

There is no night club in or around Washington unable to offer a cool and refreshing atmosphere. Checking up on the scene, we discovered that all the nighteries are well equipped with air-conditioning plants and that at no time is there a relapse in this service.

Whether one travels to the out-of-Washington clubs or remains in the city on these sweltering nights a comfortable room or dining hall will greet you. This includes every spot that this column has previously mentioned.

On the entertainment front, the Texas Rockets are skyrocketing into the hearts of the dance connoisseurs at the Shoreham Terrace this week. These lassies from America's largest State do many specialty numbers that should make each member of the troupe an individual star. Besides all this, there is a grade A dance team on the bill—Rose Blanche and Webster Elliott. Rose is a piquant lady who is a magician when it comes to balancing. The food is excellent on the Terrace and Barnee is supplying the swell music.

Just to prove that the Hi-Hat Club of the Ambassador is the crossroads of the Nation, one may walk into this gay and cool spot and see internationally famous statesmen and diplomats at any time. Miss Marie Reed, formerly Ziegfeld Follies beauty, who is posing for nationally advertised cigarettes, was a recent visitor. Kit Klein, who appeared on the stage here in Washington last week, also was present. Try the famous Hi-Hat mint julep.

Here's one on us . . . up till now we have been publicizing the Cork and Bottle Cocktail Lounge as Washington's "sophisticated" lounge . . . After I looked the word up in the dictionary . . . I feel that I should say . . . "unsophisticated . . ." My apologies, Mr. Melrose. However, if you want to enjoy a perfectly blended cocktail, drop in at the Cork and Bottle. You'll like it.

I was so hot that I didn't know what to do . . . so I dropped into the Mayfair . . . the Cafe of All Nations . . . on Thirteenth street . . . just below F . . . the only bad point about my going was that I had to fight myself to get up and leave. Then, too, the other attraction to make me want to stay was the entertainment by Beverley Stull, Jack and Leo . . . not to mention the drinks . . . P. S.—I stayed.

Witness Tells Racket Jurors Of Bribe Offer

A State witness in the trials of nine men on charges of conspiracy at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday told the jury he had been offered money not to testify.

"I was arrested by Officer Warren Peake, taken to the Hyattsville Police Station and released on $1,000 bond. Before the trial I went back to the station and saw Peake. He said give me $26.70. I gave it to him and he said if it wasn't enough he would let me know.

"I didn't hear nothing more till several months ago someone offered me money not to come out here."

Objection Sustained.

Defense counsel immediately objected to the latter statement and asked that it be stricken from the record. After a bench conference, the court granted the defense's request, providing the prosecution could not produce additional evidence to support the alleged bribery attempt.

Ogle Marbury, special prosecutor, told the court he wouldn't be able to produce the evidence then, but indicated he probably would be able to back up the colored man's statement later.

Lansdale G. Sasscer, chief of the defense counsel, asked Hamilton:

"Has any promise been made to you about getting your money back if you came out here to testify?"

Man Came to House.

Hamilton replied:

"Not by nobody except this fellow who came to my house and offered me some money."

Asked if he could recall the name of the man who offered him the money, Hamilton replied:

"Brice . . . or Baxter."

On last May 20, Washington police arrested Harry McH. Braxton, of Lakeland, Md., in Hamilton's apartment and charged him with bribery. Police, who were hidden in a closet on a "tipoff" by Keystone Automobile Club attorneys, allege that Braxton offered Hamilton $35 if he would not testify in the trial.

John Francis Phelan, of 1803 Connecticut avenue northwest, told the court he was arrested May 17, 1936 by former officers Arthur Brown and Peake, both under indictment.

Phelan said he had pulled over to the side of the road and was asleep when the officers approached him and took him to the office of another defendant, Herbert J. Moffat, former justice of the peace at Hyattsville. There, Phelan testified, he was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and asked to put up a $1,300 real estate bond or $178 cash collateral.

After friends had put up the cash collateral, Phelan said:

"I was approached by Moffat. He told me the two policemen were good fellows and there was a possibility I might lose my collateral and license if convicted, but if the officers were approached right something might be done."

Later Phelan said he saw Peake, who "gave me to understand $20 compensation for him would be all right."

The witness said he paid Peake the money. On a second visit to Moffat, Phelan said, the magistrate gave him back about $90 in cash. Moffat was quoted as saying that Officer Brown would be "taken care of out of the balance."

Rich Man's Son Rescued From Blonde in Raid

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 15.—The story of a district attorney's raid to "rescue a Pasadena millionaire's son from a blonde came out today in connection with a $510,000 damage suit filed by Mrs. Pearl Antibus, Hollywood detective.

Mrs. Antibus sued Thomas W. Warner, jr., retired founder of the Stewart-Warner automobile parts firm and former General Motors director, charging he caused an illegal raid to be made on her home.

District Attorney Buron Fitts said today the raid was made because Warner complained his son, Thomas, jr., 22, was being held "against his will as a love captive" in Mrs. Antibus' home. The father reported his son had became enamored of blonde young Mrs. Jean McDonald then obtaining a divorce, said Fitts and his chief investigator, Eugene Williams, who led the raid.

Fitts and Williams said Mrs. Antibus punched Investigator Tom Cavett on the nose and that young Warner bit Investigator B. G. Haworth's finger as he was being dragged from the house.

Mrs. McDonald, Williams said, stood by, dressed in shorts.

G. O. P. Leaders Shake Up Md. Racing Board

Brown Ousted as Steward, 5 New Inspectors Are Appointed.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 15.—The State Racing Commission, after meeting for the first time since it received a Republican majority, today announced a series of dismissals and appointments.

The commission, although it is comprised of two Republicans and a Democrat, did not oust the Democrat as chairman.

Frank Small, jr., Prince Georges County Republican leader, is the new member. Others are George R. Norris, Baltimore County Republican, and Jervis Spencer, jr., a Democrat. Spencer remains, at least for the time being, as chairman.

Most important of the changes was the dropping of George Brown, steward at mile tracks, and the promotion of William L. Harron to Brown's post. Brown has been an employe of the commission since it was established in 1920. Harron, who lives at Broome Island, Calvert County, has been on the commission pay roll as an inspector.

Douglas C. Turnbull, former chief inspector, was demoted and given charge of tests for the stimulation of horses. George D. Stanley, of Salisbury, a son-in-law of State Senator O. Straughn Lloyd (Republican), Wicomico, was given Turnbull's post.

Five new inspectors were appointed. They were Carroll Brice, of Annapolis; Bernard Beall, of Prince Georges County; William F. Broening, of Baltimore, son of the former Republican mayor; William B. Wade, member of the Baltimore City Republican Committee, and James T. Wolfe, of Hagerstown.

The steward receives $60 a day for the 100 racing days in Maryland. The inspectors get 110 days of work at $25 per day, a total of $2,750.

At the meeting, Small proposed the name of Dr. Charles W. Warner, of Bel Air, for steward. Dr. Warner was appointed by Gov. Harry W. Nice, a Republican, as commissioner of labor and statistics and later was appointed to the industrial accident commission.

Spencer said that Dr. Warner had no racing experience and he and Norris voted against Small's nominee. Small then proposed Harron's name and the two Republicans, Norris and Small, voted together to appoint him.

The commission retained its veteran secretary, James F. Hayward, of Baltimore.

Sen. Norris in Chicago.

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—U. S. Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, passed through Chicago late today en route to his summer home at Waupaca, Wis., where he planned to recuperate from a recent illness.

On the Air Today

It may be a little early to write about the events of next Tuesday, but the boys along the press and publicity way finally have caught up with this column, and since their wants are justifiable, this space is devoted for their cause.

The Variety Club, of Washington, is sponsoring a charity boxing card, which will be held Tuesday at Griffith Stadium. The money will be used for club's welfare fund, which helps support Washington's underprivileged children.

The contest, which will bring together the world's middleweight champion, Freddie Steele, and the "Alexandria Assassin," Hobo Williams, will be broadcast. Therein lies the tale. A press release was found on this desk yesterday afternoon from the publicity department of the fight, and it had to do with the broadcasting of the fight by the Columbia Broadcasting Co. It said threat the fight was going to be "exclusively" broadcast, and that Ted Husing would assist Arch McDonald in the description.

It was emphasized, however, that Washingtonians will be unable to receive this broadcast, as no Washington station will air the event. Everyone must be present at the stadium in order to see the fight. The stadium, however, only holds, at the most, 30,000 people, and that leaves 450,000 persons here in Washington who will be unable to get into the park. And, that's just what we would like to see happen. There should be 30,000 people in the park ready for the evening's program.

Popular Newspaper Boy

Jimmy Bumpas, 14 years old, a Post Newspaper Boy, has the rank of Junior Carrier in the Newspaper Boys of America. He lives at 1448 Park Road Northwest, and is a student at Powell Junior High School and is working to realize his ambition to become a physician. His hobby is building ship models and his favorite sport is boat racing.

The training Jimmy is now receiving as a Newspaper Boy under The Post's N. B. A. plan, which makes every boy the head of his own business, will be valuable to him in later years. You are one of his customers, the same as you are the customer of your grocer or of any other businessman with whom you "trade." You can encourage your Post Newspaper Boy and assist him in the successful operation of his business by paying him when he makes his first collection call each week.

'Truce' Broken By Court Foes, Says President

Tells Barkley Opponents Violate Robinson Mourning Period.

court fight, that I cannot think of anything worse to say," said Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, said that in spite of the President's letter, he preferred not to comment on pending questions until the late leader is buried.

Addressed to "My dear Alben," the President's letter followed a day of leaderless floundering on court plan procedure, and strong indications the opposition is now strong enough to shelve the bill.

Ask End of Bickering.

The Attorney General had conferred with the President, four Senators had appealed to the White House for an end of court bickering, and a group of Senate "freshmen" had favored laying the court bill aside, but opposed sending it back to committee.

Opposition leaders themselves had conferred, but postponed decision on a course of action until after Robinson's interment. They refused public comment. It was learned they claim 50 votes for recommittal of the bill, but were debating it out to complete victory or defeat.

The President said it was with "regret" that he found that "advantage is being taken of what in all decency, should be a period of mourning."

"Because of this situation," he told Barkley, "I am compelled in the public interest, though against every inclination, to write to you."

His singling out of Barkley as "acting majority leader" was regarded as highly significant in view of the sharply contested race to be Robinson's successor.

Barkley was named by Robinson as his assistant leader, but in view of the Arkansan's death he now has no official status, some parliamentarians insist.

Two other Senators—Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina—are definitely in the race, with Harrison's voting strength apparently equaling that the Kentuckian.

It was the second of a series of incidents indicating the President wanted Barkley to succeed Robinson as leader, although Harrison and Byrnes both have been his close friends.

Attributed to Townsend.

The first report was attributed to Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana, who conferred with the President Wednesday and afterward said the State machine will not support Van Nuys for re-election. It was learned Townsend told a number of Senators the President favored Barkley for leader.

Informed of this yesterday, Harrison commented only, "That's very interesting."

Although Harrison is publicly committed to the President's court plan, and has never wavered from it, a majority of the court-bill opponents are known to prefer the popular, gray Mississippian. For the first time, the leadership contest appeared to tie definitely into the court battle.

Their visit clothed in complete secrecy, the Senate delegation led by Barkley arrived unheralded at the White House last night, but encountered newspapermen on departure.

"We had a general discussion of the whole legislative situation, not restricted to the court bill, but taking in all legislative matters," said Barkley.

Asked if the court fight will be resumed at once, he added.

"Of course, the court bill is in order as the Senate's unfinished business, and therefore will come up automatically at 2 p. m. Tuesday. Whether it will be set aside for other legislation is a matter that was not determined."

Pittman was asked if he assumed the proponents have votes enough to block a motion to recommit the court bill.

"No assumption is required," he replied, "it is self evident." Later he added: "There is not the slightest thought of recommittal."

Speaking for what he said was a majority of the 13 first-term Senators who conferred yesterday at the Capitol, Senator Clyde L. Herring, of Iowa, said they predominantly favored Barkley.

"We feel he is the most liberal," said Herring. "But the President may indicate his choice. We agreed to vote for the man the President wanted for leader. We feel he is entitled to his own leader."

Herring said the Senate "freshmen" would like to lay the court bill aside in favor of immediate action on the farm program, but doubted this could be done. He said they were "fearful" once the court bill was disposed of there would be a hasty adjournment.

Visited by Senators.

Immediate effect of the President's letter was to definitely spike rumors that the President was willing to let Congress decide whether the bill should be laid aside for the session.

This report followed a trek to the White House by four Democratic Senators, all purportedly in favor of sending the bill back to the committee for the session.

All declined public comment on what transpired at the White House, but Senators in whom they confided told of a case made out for recommitting the bill in the interest of party harmony, and of the President's apparent willingness to "let Congress decide."

Those in the group were Senators Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan; Charles O. Andrews, of Florida; Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa; and Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado.

It was learned the group had considered a public statement jointly favoring a return of the court bill to committee, but abandoned the plan. At least three of the four, it is believed, would support a motion to recommit the bill.

Favors Amendment.

Brown later in a statement referred to his "original" position, which he said has not changed.

"I agree with much of the temperate criticism of the Supreme Court," Brown said. "I do not like the original court bill. I stated I would support any reasonable compromise. I can best assist in achieving this result by refraining from comment until the final vote is had. I will vote according to my convictions."

Senator Andrews actively favors submission of a constitutional amendment, increasing the court to 11 members, and compelling retirement at 75. The President's letter indicated his opposition to any constitutional amendment.

"Probably the best solution," Andrews said, following his White House visit, "in view of the fact that the proposed compromise has been debated from every angle on the floor, and no one is in doubt as to the meaning of every phrase, would be to submit it to a special committee, or perhaps to the Judiciary Committee, to report out a recommendation without unusual delay."

Informed of the letter, Senator Burke commented publicly for the first time since Robinson was stricken.

Burke said opposition leaders have made "a studied effort to reach no decisions and to refrain from public comment, either on the court bill or the vacancy in the leadership."

"We proposed to continue that policy until full respect had been paid to our beloved leader," the Nebraskan continued.

"But apparently there has been no cessation of activity at the White House in the court matter. And in view of the letter made public by the President, I am ready to make a statement.

"If the Administration does not realize the necessity of ending the court fight, and wants to fight it out to an issue, we are ready, willing and anxious to do so.

"Some of us had thought that a vote to recommit the bill would do much to ease the situation. But I now say I am heartily in favor of the President's suggestion. I would much prefer to have the debate go on. And I am confident the growing sentiment in favor of the opposition cause will greatly increase thereby."

It was noted that the President nowhere in his letter to Barkley insisted on passage of the court plan either in its original form or in the substitute draft framed by Robinson.

Instead, he stressed the "objectives," designed he said to improve "the process of justice in all Federal courts, from the lowest to the highest," including addition of younger judges to all courts having men on the bench who are past the retirement age.

He said the "methods" originally proposed were not "sacred or final," but action was immediately necessary, and it could not be attained in a reasonable time by a Constitutional amendment.

Responsibility on Congress.

"To abandon any reform of the judicial processes at this session of the Congress means an abandonment of the objectives," he wrote Barkley.

"An abandonment of judicial reform, including of course all the Federal courts, because of the inability of a majority of Senators or a majority of Representatives to agree on a method and reach a vote places the responsibility squarely on the Congress of the United States."

He said his own objectives, and those "of the great majority of our citizens," remain the same, and it is "the duty of the Congress" at this session to carry them out.

The President said Barkley had called his attention "to certain events of yesterday and today," and he wanted "clarify the situation" as to judicial reform.

Secret Parleys Held.

Secret conferences on the court situation have been held by both sides in the court fight since Robinson's death, and continued yesterday.

Opposition leaders met and afterward disclosed they would take no formal steps until after Robinson's funeral in Little Rock.

Sentiment was said to be divided in the group between plans for a motion to recommit the bill and alternative proposals to fight the bill to an "up and down" vote.

Fitchburg, Mass., July 15 (AP).—Mayor Robert E. Greenwood sent a telegram today to Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, rebuking him for his remarks made yesterday that President Roosevelt should abandon his plans to force the Supreme Court bill through Congress because of Senator Robinson's death.

The telegram said: "Your bad taste in utilizing the death of Senator Robinson to warn the President against fighting God is surpassed only by your conceit in assuming the role of God's spokesman."

Dentists Describe New 'Pain Killer' At Penny a Tooth

Atlantic City, N. J., July 15 (AP).—A new "pain killer," described as the most effective anesthetic yet devised for tooth-drilling, was announced before the American Dental Association Convention today by its discoverers. Drs. Harold A. Osserman and Abraham Taub, of New York City.

The new chemical, developed at Columbia University's College of Pharmacy, has been named "tabesthesin," and was said by Dr. Osserman to be "100 per cent effective" in 80 percent of the cases in which it has been tried, and totally ineffective in only 4 per cent.

It works on much the same principle as the anesthetic brought out two years ago by Dr. Leroy L. Hartman of the same university, and contains one of the same ingredients—thymol. The first district dental society of New York City reported Dr. Hartman's preparation was effective in only 32 per cent of the cases in a special test.

of the public" but permits commercial passenger and freight air liners to land there and maintain hangars.

Regulations and charges to be assessed the private users are to be drafted by the supervising agency.

Also Open to U. S. Agencies.

All government agencies that operate aircraft are to be permitted to use the airport without charge.

Senator King said he wanted to confer with other members of the Airport Commission before placing the responsibility for supervision of the airport.

"Personally," he said, "I would like to see this authority given to the District Commissioners. I believe they could handle the job as efficiently as any one."

Senator King said he would not like to see the airport turned over to the War Department and he charged that the Bureau of Air Commerce of the Department of Commerce is inefficient.

Nichols expressed the opinion supervision should be turned over to either the Army Air Corps or the Bureau of Air Commerce.

The Oklahoman, in disclosing his plan to promote his auxiliary airport idea, pointed out that it would be possibly two years or more before the Camp Springs Airport could be made ready for use even if authorized and appropriated for at present session of Congress.

He said the transfer of air-liner operations to Bolling Field in the meantime would not solve the problem of safety and adequacy.

"Bolling Field is not much better than Washington Airport," he added.

Foresees Expansion.

If Military road is closed and the lagoon is filled in, he predicted, the owners of Washington Airport will expand the flying field so as to make it safe and adequate for air-liner traffic.

He said he would probably not propose that either the Federal or District governments acquire the Washington Airport at this time, however, but that the airport owners be given the right-of-way to develop the field themselves without cost to either government.

Nichols, along with Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, tried to persuade the Washington Airport Commission to make provision for an auxiliary airport, either at Washington Airport or at Gravelly Point, as well as a more monumental flying field at Camp Springs.

They contended that the Camp Springs site was far enough from Washington to discourage its use by persons wishing to make hurried flights to New York or other Eastern points.

Judge Assails 2-Year Delay In Taylor Case

didn't know that five continuances already had been granted."

Weinstein, nervously tugging at a straw hat, admitted the fugitive had "left this jurisdiction" and he had no knowledge of his whereabouts.

"I am prepared to pay the bond," said Weinstein, "but I would like an opportunity to apprehend this man."

Taylor, colored, was arrested July 2, 1935, by agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Allegedly driving a truck loaded with contraband liquor, Taylor reportedly jumped the vehicle and attempted to flee on foot. The truck, careening driverless through Naylor's court southwest, struck and killed Annie B. Briscoe, 60-year-old colored woman, and injured her companion, Edna Chase, both of whom lived in the court.

Case Postponed Five Times.

Since that time the case has been postponed five times. Although held by a coroner's jury and indicted by the grand jury, Taylor has never been brought to trial.

Shortly after his arrest, according to Weinstein's explanation to Justice O'Donoghue yesterday, Taylor twice appeared in court. Each time the case was continued, Weinstein said, and when it was called a third time, Taylor had disappeared.

"This man has had more than a reasonable opportunity to present himself in court," said O'Donoghue yesterday. "If he is guilty, he should be tried and punished. If he is innocent, he should be tried and freed."

Weinstein intimated that the complaining witness—a Federal agent—no longer was interested in pressing charge against Taylor.

Called Ahead of Time.

Yesterday was the final day set for Taylor's appearance. But the case was called Wednesday—24 hours before the scheduled time.

Having never heard of the case and with District Court now in summer recess, the justice agreed to a month's postponement. It was not until later that he learned how long the case had been pending.

Taylor's disappearance has been under investigation by the Washington Criminal Justice Association for several months. Repeatedly, the associations agents attempted to learn why Taylor was never prosecuted.

"This is just the sort of thing we are trying to curb," said Dr. James Allen Nolan, director of the criminal justice group. "We have found no reason why an accused criminal should remain under the same bond for two years with no efforts to bring him to trial nor forfeit the bond."

As yesterday's unusual court session opened, Weinstein suggested that all concerned should consult with Justice O'Donoghue at his bench.

"This case shall be heard in open court," responded the justice. "That's why I called you back."

Grandmother Ends Life by Inhaling Gas; Leaves Note

Nearby was a sealed envelope which apparently contained the secret of her suicide. It was addressed to members of the family and police declined to reveal its contents.

Senate Passes Tenant Aid Bill During 'Truce'

Votes Grasshopper Fight Funds; Pope Offers 'AAA of 1937.'

By the Associated Press.

The court bill truce broke a legislative jam yesterday and permitted enactment of long-pending farm legislation. The Senate sent to the White House a bill authorizing an $85,000,000 outlay in three years to help tenants become farm owners.

It then joined the House in appropriating $1,000,000 to combat a grasshopper plague in Western States, and permitted Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, to introduce his proposed "agricultural adjustment act of 1937." The latter includes Secretary Wallace's ever-normal granary proposal.

The tenancy legislation empowers the Secretary of Agriculture to lend $10,000,000 this fiscal year; $25,000,000 next, and $50,000,000 annually thereafter, at 3 per cent interest, for farm purchases.

Loans would be retired in 40 years or less.

Advocates expressed confidence Mr. Roosevelt would sign it.

Agriculture Department officials said the grasshopper appropriation would supplement relief fund allotments for the campaign against plagues in Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, North and South Dakota, Kansas and Nebraska. The campaign may be carried later to Missouri, Illinois, and possibly other States, they said.

After introducing the new crop-control bill, Pope issued a statement saying a 200,000,000-bushel wheat surplus is in prospect this year.

The measure is designed to stabilize farm prices. Its ever-normal granary section provides for the storage of up to 10 per cent of the yields of wheat, cotton, corn, rice and tobacco in good harvest years for use in poor ones. Government loans would be made on the stored crops.

Blast Dashes 20 to Death in Indiana Mine

Hurled 'Like Footballs' Against Walls By Explosion.

people in this terrible mine disaster."

The explosion occurred shortly after the day shift had gone to work. Bond said his watch stopped at 7:06 a. m., indicating the time of the blast.

"My lamp was blown out. Then I smelled gas. I ripped off my shirt, dampened it in water from the mine floor and put it over my face.

"My buddy, Curt Miller, about 20 feet away from me, lay dead. I had just been talking to him. I can't understand it. I was closer to the explosion than he was.

"That wind was terrific. After the first big blast there were two or three slight blasts. When it was all over, I got up and ran 200 yards. Some of them said I did it in three seconds but it couldn't have been that fast. I still don't see how I got out and my buddy was killed."

Cox said he was in the explosion at the City Coal Mine, on the outskirts of the City of Sullivan, February 21, 1925, in which 51 men were killed.

"This blast today was almost as bad," he said. "It's just lucky that there weren't more men working near the blast."

Third Major Disaster.

State police, Boy Scouts and WPA workers joined forces to control the crowd, estimated at 500 persons, which gathered near the tipple.

Sullivan County has had a third serious mine disaster. On January 29, 1931, an explosion in the Little Betty mine, near Dugger, claimed 29 lives. There are many deep-shaft mines in the county.

In December, 1925, 36 men were killed in an explosion in the Francisco mine, near Princeton, about 50 miles south of Sullivan.

Today's disaster brought the death list for Indiana mine accidents to 1,794, according to records of the State Bureau of Mines. These records include all fatalities.

Investigations into today's disaster were opened immediately by State and Federal officials and the Glendora Coal Co.

3 Desperadoes Kidnap Motorist, Vanish in Texas

Oklahoma City, July 15 (AP).—Pete Traxler, Southwestern desperado and two fellow fugitives from a Texas prison farm, kidnaped a youth identified as Baird Markham, son of Gen. Baird Markham, president of the American Petroleum Institute, near Atwood, Okla., today.

The younger Markham, 21, a student of Yale University, is on vacation, obtaining oil field experience as a scout for the Delaney Petroleum Co. Gen. Markham is on vacation near Nisswa, Minn.

Officers said Traxler and his companions—who have left a trail of kidnapings and robberies since they fled the Texas prison farm several days ago, held up Markham on a highway near Atwood.

The desperadoes took the automobile in which Markham was riding, forced the youth to accompany them and fled south over rough country toward Atoka, Okla.

Hotel Radio Thief Finds Free Board In District Jail

Everett G. Le Rouge, 18, of New York City, finally has found a place with free board and room.

Le Rouge was arrested several days ago after he had let himself out the window of a downtown hotel, owing several days' board and taking the hotel's radio with him. Police arrested him when he registered at another hotel, radio in hand.

At both places he assured the management his mother would be down from New York shortly to pay the bills. But yesterday his mother had not yet appeared. So Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran sentenced Le Rouge to 120 days in jail—60 days for larcency of the radio and 60 more for not paying his bill.

World Poultry Chiefs Open 3-Day Meeting

Directors of the World Poultry Congress yesterday opened a three-day meeting at the Raleigh Hotel, with selection of a 1939 convention city as the principal item of business. Seven cities are applicants for the job. One of them, Chicago, will send Mayor Edward J. Kelly to plead in its behalf. Other cities in the race are Syracuse, N. Y.; Springfield, Mass.; Philadelphia, Cleveland, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn., and St. Louis.

Love to Live in Block House

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—Instead of poring over blueprints, honeymooners of the future will play with a set of blocks before ordering their homes built.

That was the prediction voiced today by Harvey Wiley Corbett, New York architect, who said that within 30 years houses will be manufactured on a mass production basis, cheaper, more beautiful and more comfortable than the finest dwelling of today.

In a lecture at the summer session of Columbia University, he said:

"The manufacturing company will send you a set of blocks which are tiny replicas of the various sections of a house. On your dining room table you will erect your own model by fitting together the blocks. Thus you will know exactly how the actual house will look. Your home will not be the same as every one else's because it will have been planned by you.

"When you have completed the model to your own satisfaction, you will order the blocks from the factory by number. Each block will cost a certain amount. The total expense of the house will be computed simply by adding the prices of all the blocks used.

"If anything should happen to one of the sections, it can easily be replaced, just as the smashed fender of a car is replaced. When the babies come, the house may be enlarged by purchasing more sections. After the children grow up and move away, the home can readily be made smaller again."

When that day comes, he said, the architecture of 1937 will be looked back upon as "barbaric."

Pastor Admits Killing Woman With Hammer

Pittsfield, Ill., July 15 (AP).—Merrill Johnston, State's attorney of Pike County, said tonight the Rev. C. E. Newton, 51, had admitted he struck Mrs. Dennis Kelly, 45, on the head with a hammer and tossed her body into the Mississippi River last Tuesday.

The minister's confession in regard to the death of his former parishioner and neighbor at Paris, Mo., was made in the county jail here after he had denied for two days any connection with the crime.

"We began to scuffle in the car along in my car," Johnston said he related in the statement. "I wanted to turn back home, but she didn't.

"We began t ocsuffle in the car and she fell out, striking her head and injuring herself. Trying to get her back into the car I fell out, too.

"I got panicky and struck her on the head with a hammer, and then drove back to the bridge (Mark Twain Bridge across the Mississippi River at Hannibal, Mo.) and pushed her over the banister."

Bob Burns Says:

By Bob Burns.

Of all living things, man is the most complicated.

My Aunt Dutty was an expert housekeeper and always dreamed of makin' a good home for some man, but she married a bachelor who had a habit of runnin' out with the boys every night. He stayed home for a little while and then he started runnin' out again. One day Aunt Dutty called in a neighbor and says, "I don't understand why he don't stay home when I keep my home so neat!" and the neighbor says, "Well, that's the trouble with you—you want'ta fix your house so he'll feel at home in it."

Two months later Aunt Dutty saw the neighbor and said, "Well, I've followed your advice—I tried to make the place seem like home to him. I took up the parlor rug and sprinkled sawdust on the floor and put a beer barrel in the corner but it didn't do no good!"

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Delegate

The Forest Service is being represented at the Fourth International Grassland Conference, now in progress at Aberystwith, Wales, by W. R. Chapline, chief of the division of range research.

In an address to the conference Chapline assured the delegates that the magnitude of range land problems is now recognized in the United States, "thanks to the labors of research in making the destructive forces on range lands understandable to the public."

But he pointed out that "of the 728,000,000 acres of range land in the United States, supporting about 55,000,000 head of cattle, sheep and other livestock, large areas have been depleted by overgrazing and must be restored by better methods of range management."

Chapline was born in Nebraska and began his forestry studies at the University of Nebraska. During summer vacations he worked in the national forests of the West, specializing, usually, in range work and making reconnaissance of the grass resources of various districts.

By 1917 Chapline had seen and appraised so many of the herds and ranges of the West—had become so well equipped with administrative and scientific experience—that the Government chose him to head an organization to increase the production of meat supplies for war purposes. The work afforded new opportunities for the study of herd and range problems.

When James Jardine, now chief of the Division of Experiment Stations, Agriculture Department, left the Forest Service in 1920, Chapline was picked for the job as chief of the Range Research Division.

Interior Department Lodge 35, A. F. G. E., has elected officers as follows: George A. Warren, president; Frederick A. Heffernan, first vice president; Irene Wright, second vice president; Eugenia E. Miller, secretary-treasurer; Nevin B. Johnson, sergeant-at-arms, and delegates to the District Department, Clinton A. Quencer, John F. Lundquist and George A. Warren.

The Secretary of War has authorized Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, head of the Inland Waterways Corporation, to make effective a retirement plan providing a pension system for all employes of that corporation. A contract has been entered into with a life insurance company which will render the plan operative as soon as 75 per cent of the employes of the corporation have signified a desire to participate in such benefits. This is in addition to the system of group insurance recently established by the corporation, which found enthusiastic support among all classes of the employes.

Sultan Calls Peace Parley On Building

To Hear Both Sides in D. C. Walkout for Closed Shop.

Commissioner Seeks to End Tie-Up of School Jobs.

Striking union builders and their employers will be summoned by Commissioner Sultan today in an attempt to settle their battle over the "open shop" which yesterday halted work on five District schools and threatens to spread to some Federal buildings.

In a strike unique in the recollection of Commissioner Sultan, 250 union masons, carpenters and other building trades workers walked out on the school jobs because contractors have employed some nonunion workmen.

Two painting jobs here on the City Postoffice and the Internal Revenue Building may be halted, according to union officials, unless only union men are employed. These jobs are scheduled to start Monday.

Other Jobs in Line.

Work was held up yesterday on additions to five schoolhouses. They are the Alice Deal School, the Paul Junior High School, the Charles Young School, Eastern High School and the Grimke Elementary Building. Volue of the work totaled $850,000.

Numerous other important building jobs lie in the line of the strikers, including the new District Police Court and the new Chain Bridge, neither of which has been affected yet. Federal projects such as the new Apex Building, the annex to the Bureau of Engraving and the Government Printing Office are manned solidly by the unions and therefore do not seem in jeopardy.

"The union men have walked out because nonunion men have been hired by the contractors. That is the sole issue between them," Col. Sultan, veteran engineer, said yesterday.

"Both types get the same pay. There is no controversy over wages or hours or working conditions, as is usually the case in strikes. This is the first building strike of the kind I've ever come face to face with."

Walkout Spreads.

Work stopped first on the Paul and Young schools, both under contract to the John W. Hunt Co. According to the Building Trades Council, of which John Locher is executive secretary, the Hunt Co. refused to withdraw nonunion workmen.

It next spread to the Alice Deal job, under contract to the Lacchi Construction Co., and to the Eastern High job being undertaken by the Harwood Nebel Construction Co. Work on the freshly started Grimke Elementary School stopped at the same time.

The Deal and Young school additions were expected to be ready to open in the fall, but a strike will delay their availability to a city in crying need of more classrooms. However, only 10 classrooms and a gymnasium were being built at Alice Deal and only 8 classrooms and a gymnasium at the Young School.

Future Trouble Feared.

"The serious part of this strike," commented Sultan, "is that all our future bids will now be in jeopardy. We have appropriations for 3 schools, the Petworth Library, the Health Center, and Chain Bridge for 1938."

It was explained that the District government under the law must award its contracts to the lowest responsible bidder. The only stipulation regarding labor is wages must be predetermined by the Labor Department and paid on a basis of the prevailing rate in the locality. The union pay rate is always stipulated here.

All United States building contracts, Sultan said, release the contractors from this responsibility in case of strikes.

That the strike here may be of national significance was pointed out in the District Building yesterday. The policy adopted in the Capital on this strike will perhaps affect Federal policy on the same question in other labor disputes in construction jobs financed by the Government all over the country.

The Painters Union, which is the only one so far to come into direct relationship with the Federal Government over the question, will take its men off the Internal Revenue Building job and the City Postoffice job Monday, threatened B. P. Holcombe, business agent. He demanded that no nonunion men be started.

At the Building Trades Council headquarters at 1211 Connecticut avenue, it was said one of the grievances was over the classification of workers. "They've been classifying journeymen carpenters as helpers and giving them helpers' pay," an officer said. This phase of the dispute was unknown to school and District officials.

At one time yesterday it was believed the strike might be threatening the Capitol itself, where air-cooling systems are being installed, but David Lynn, Capitol architect, denied a statement nonunion men are employed on the job.

It's a home on the gentle river, where fish dinners swim at doorstep for the Forshees and hundreds of others who live in houseboats along the Potomac's shore and beat the landlord. The Forshee family, from left to right, above, is comprised of Hazel, 15; Tony, in her arms; Roy, 17; George Forshee, the father; Mrs. Forshee, and George, jr. A home on the river wasn't quite so romantic for Mrs. Edna Lewis yesterday. It was wash day.

These sultry summer days they live like gods and goddesses. The green Potomac is their Main street. Its traffic is neither harsh nor metallic. Just the churning of paddles as canoes glide by in the night, and the putt-putting of motorboats going up and down stream in a season when adventure and out-of-doors supplant boredom.

There is no rent to pay. Brush salesmen and young men working their way through the University of Nonesuch by selling periodicals and encyclopedias darken not their doorsteps. The food comes from the river, for there swim the fish which fry in their pans at breakfast, lunch and dinner. Cans are supplementary. The sky arches overhead, and the cool wind blows.

The Forshees, George and his wife Mary, are a typical houseboat family.

George and Mary Forshee have three children—Roy, 17; Hazel, 15, and George, jr. George, jr., is the baby, and he is 12. The family includes Tony, a German police dog. Tony became famous in the flood a year ago last March, when the swirling waters destroyed the home of the Forshees, near Three Sisters. People took pictures of Tony, who heroically refused to leave his post of duty.

The Forshees have christened their houseboat The Ark because it served them after the flood. Forshee, a calm and pleasant individual, is from Wilmington, N. C.

"Seems like the river is our home," observed Mrs. Forshee yesterday.

"We love it. The breezes. The starlight. The sun. The moon. The paddles churning the water. We don't need vacations. Life is a vacation on the river. The river is good."

There are three rooms in The Ark. They are tidy and neat, but the radio is broken. Flowers are in a vase on a table. Curtains dance in the breeze.

Another houseboat householder is Mrs. Edna Lewis. Her boat is not far from the Forshees, opposite Georgetown. Here she lives with her husband, Henry Lewis, and here she is happy.

"The river's my inspiration, believe me," she says.

D. C. Detective, Veteran of 26 Years, Demoted

Irving Rosenberg Made Patrolman; Action Unexplained.

Irving Rosenberg, a member of the Washington Police Department for 26 years, was reduced in rank from precinct detective to patrolman in the uniform division by Maj. Ernest W. Brown last night.

The police superintendent said his action was based on a report made by Rosenberg's superior, Inspector Edward Kelly, but declined to reveal the contents of the report.

At the same time Brown issued a general order covering shifts in police personnel effected during the last three months and involving six lieutenants, a detective sergeant and 18 privates.

Rosenberg was elevated to detective sergeant last April 1. He was present on May 2 when Inspector Kelly and Inspector Maurice Collins arrested on a charge of extortion Precinct Detective Luther C. Wise who since has been suspended and indicted.

Rosenberg's superiors, however, were emphatic in saying the officer was not involved in the Wise incident.

Rosenberg was transferred from the Tenth to the Second Precinct. At the same time Private J. G. Austin was elevated from the uniform division where he had been serving in the public relations squad to the Second Precinct as a detective, while Precinct Detective Charles A. Carver was transferred from the Second to the Tenth Precinct. Others transferred were:

Pct. Det. C. E. Cannon, No. 6 to No. 10; Samuel S. Bryant, 3 to 2; Benjamin Heard, 2 to 9; R. P. Livermore, 9 to 2; Thomas D. Parrach, 6 to 2; [illegible] Ehlman, 2 to 6; R. E. Burton, Traffic Bureau to 11; E. H. Braxton, 3 to 4.

A. B. Clothier, 2 to 4; J. A. Hunt, 2 to 3; J. O. Patton, 2 to 9; C. F. Swann, 4 to 2; W. F. Winfield, 2 to 5; George R. Browning, 2 to 6; Eric T. Warren, 6 to 2, and Charles A. Scott to the motorcycle division.

In addition Brown's orders included the transfer of Lieut. William T. Storm from the Traffic Bureau to administrative headquarters in charge of the police school; Lieut. John A. Fondahl, 1 to the Traffic Bureau; Lieut. W. H. Thomas, from head of the police school to 1; Lieut. William J. Cunningham, traffic to 11; Lieut. A. M. Winifree, 11 to 1, and Lieut. R. C. Pearce, 1 to traffic.

Cab Man Appeals Homicide Verdict

The appeal of a Washington taxicab driver, convicted last month under the negligent homicide act, yesterday was taken under advisement by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran. The driver, Bernard Brown, 23, of 3105 Fourteenth street northeast, pleaded for an arrest of judgment after his conviction, then appealed his case on the ground that the negligent homicide act contravened the fifth and sixth amendments.

Brown was driver of the taxicab that collided with No. 17 Engine Company, fatally injuring Sergt. Vernon C. Richardson, a fireman.

1,000 Attend 18th Reunion Of Marnemen

More than 1,000 members of the Society of the Third Marne Division, and their families, assembled last night at the Wardman Park Hotel in commemoration of the memorable day 18 years ago when five crack regiments of German troops retreated before the Third Division of U. S. regulars in one of the most decisive battles of the World War.

The annual reunion is held in the middle of each July to commemorate the Second Battle of the Marne and the first major battle of the Third Division. For 18 years the Marnemen have assembled to pay homage to their comrades who died in action.

Following a reception last night members and their guests saw moving pictures of a tour of Europe. With comments by Cal Farley, the pictures depicted familiar spots and brought tears and cheers from many veterans. Today's program calls for a sightseeing trip from 1 to 5 p. m. regimental dinners from 6 to 8 and moving pictures of the Third Division in action will be shown from 8 to 10. A dance in the Continental Room of the Wardman will follow.

Tomorrow, following a business meeting from 9 to 10:30 a. m., members will go to Arlington National Cemetery where a wreath will be placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by Mrs. Joanne Thorp, of Irvine, Ky.

2 Welfare Camps Plan 'Open House'

Starting next week, a series of "open camp days" will be observed at Camps Good Will and Pleasant, which are operated in the Chopawamsic (Va.) recreational area by the Family Service Association.

An opportunity to visit the camps, observe the programs and partake of a typical camp meal will be provided representative groups on each open camp day during the rest of the season.

Miss Betty Reed, a senior at American University, and Miss Virginia Walton, recent graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent, will organize the parties at Camp Good Will. Visitors to Camp Pleasant will be greeted by a committee of girls from Miner Teachers College, under the direction of Miss Audrey Dickerson.

Sen. King Seeks Treasury Loan For District

Joint Resolution Would Enable City to Borrow Needed Funds.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday introduced a joint resolution in the Senate to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to make emergency loans to the District government.

At the same time Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, was promised recognition on Monday by the Speaker to call up a similar resolution in the House.

Senator King said he would poll the District Committee so the resolution will be on the calendar ready for consideration at the first opportunity.

"If the House hasn't acted by Tuesday," he said, "I shall try to call up the Senate resolution. If the House has approved the Kennedy resolution, I shall move to substitute it."

The chairman of the Senate District Committee said the fate of the omnibus tax measure depends upon whether the President insists upon carrying on the court bill fight. If the latter is to be resumed, he added, there is little chance of early action on the tax measure.

The joint resolution provides the Secretary of the Treasury shall fix the interest rate to be charged the District, but specifies it shall not exceed 3 per cent.

District officials have warned Congress that unless some financial relief is accorded the Capital by August 1 employes may go payless and debts unpaid.

Parking Sign Falls As Driver Seeks Spot to Park Car

J. L. Gelbman, chief of the division of printing in the District Building, found a parking place last night at Thirteenth-and-a-half and D streets northwest. He parked under a "Parking 25c" sign. Gelbman's car crashed against a support and the sign came down on his car, damaging top and hood.

An electric wire, carrying current to eight 1,000-watt bulbs fell across the car with the sign, but Attendants Wade Robinson and H. C. Scott turned off the switch when they heard the crash.

Meanwhile the cause of the accident, Gelbman said, was half a block north on Thirteenth-and-a-half street. A drug store truck was parked there, and its lights blinded Gelbman, who was unhurt. He lives at 1105 Alabama avenue southeast.

D. C. Garbage Men To Vote on Strike

District garbage collectors are scheduled to meet tonight at 8:30 o'clock for a strike vote. The meeting will take place in union headquarters, 631 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

James Kimbroe, business agent of the Hod Carriers Union, parent organization to the garbage collectors, announced that a vote to strike was certain unless prompt action by District officials was taken in charges against W. R. Wood, superintendent of garbage collections. Charged with favoritism and mistreatment of men placed under him, Wood was tried three weks ago and the case referred to Assistant Corporation Counsel Stanley DeNeale.

Gobel Plans To Go Ahead With Abattoir

Anti-Nuisance Bill Dead for Session; $500,000 to Be Spent.

Turning a second somersault in two days, the Adolph Gobel Co. yesterday announced that it would proceed at once in the construction of an abattoir in Benning.

Frank M. Frior, president, made the announcement following a conference with Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, who took the floor in opposition to the anti-nuisance bill which would have blocked the Gobel plant.

On Wednesday Timothy T. Ansberry, one of the company's attorneys, appeared before the House District Committee and said the meat packing concern was ready to move to a place where it would be welcome. He at first asked $300,000 compensation, and subsequently said he would advise the company to leave Washington regardless.

Lawyer's Statement Confirmed.

Frior confirmed the authenticity of Ansberry's offer on Wednesday, but yesterday said he had received contrary advice by D. Edward Clark, who had represented the Gobel company before the Senate and House District Committees previously.

"I am issuing instructions to the Turner Construction Co. to proceed at once with construction of an abattoir for the Adolph Gobel Co. at Benning," he said.

"It should be ready for operation about October 1, and it will be the most modern abattoir in the East."

Frior said he had been given assurance the plans for the slaughterhouse meet all Government specifications, and he expressed confidence the Bureau of Animal Industry will grant an operating permit at the proper time.

"We are willing to take a chance on that anyway," he said.

He said that the Gobel company now operates an abattoir in New York within 10 minutes of Times Square and that it never has had any complaints.

As the House District Committee voted to table the antinuisance bill along with a motion to reconsider, the legislation cannot be revived in the House this session.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, one of the members who participated in the hearing, said there is no chance of further action by the committee before next January. Meanwhile the Gobel plant will have been opened unless officials again change their minds.

The Gobel company plans to spend more than $500,000 in building the Benning plant and to employ several hundred men.

The antinuisance bill was sponsored by the chairmen of the House and Senate District committees after it had been drafted under direction of Secretary Ickes, who objected to the projected abattoir on the ground that it was adjacent to a PWA low-cost housing development in Anacostia.

Miss Dietrich Is Extolled by Fellow Artist

By Herbert Marshall.

Hollywood, July 15 (U.P.).—I fear that I may be violating one of the codes of chivalry by discussing a lady I have known for quite some years now, but I hope she will forgive me.

Her name is Marlene Dietrich. When she came to America—I believe it was about seven years ago—it was my good fortune to be cast opposite her in her first picture, "The Blonde Venus." I have just worked with her in her most recent film, Ernst Lubitsch's "Angel." It is a rather interesting coincidence that I was her husband in both stories.

Being Miss Dietrich's husband on the screen is a diverting experience, and I have no doubt that millions of men have envied me. I wish to assure them that their envy is justified.

Persons ask me whether Miss Dietrich has changed during the interval between the two roles. Miss Dietrich has changed. I suppose everyone does with the passing of seven years. The change in her is quite remarkable, however, because she has changed contrary to the natural order of things. The years aren't so kind to most persons, but I can give you my solemn word of honor that she is lovelier today than she was seven years ago.

Look at the Evidence.

But you don't have to take my word for it. There is plenty of photographic evidence. Look at one of her pictures as "The Blonde Venus" and another one of her as "Angel." I'll be willing to stand by your verdict.

We had the contrasting pictures on the set one day, and she discussed the matter with me. I think what Miss Dietrich had to say should be of particular interest to the ladies. It's an encouraging thing. Miss Dietrich has an abundance of natural good looks, you know; perhaps as much or more than any other woman in the world.

"Looking my best," she told me, "has become my business, and if I couldn't learn something about my business in seven years, I think I would be very stupid."

Now then, Miss Dietrich's philosophy of beauty is quite a remarkable thing. She's cool and objective about it. She has reduced her own beauty to a matter of science. She looks at her face, and for her it becomes a matter of the symmetry of line, mass and color.

Applies Own Make-up.

This introduces an interesting, little known fact. I have read numerous accounts of the skillful make-up artists employed by Miss Dietrich to apply the rouge and shadings essential to a proper highlighting for the camera. The fact is that she considers this too important a task to assign to anyone. In consequence, Miss Dietrich is her own make-up artist. She has made herself up ever since "The Blue Angel," the picture that established her in Europe. Miss Dietrich does allow a make-up artist to work on her eyebrows, but that is only because she has established the line they are to follow, and it is merely a routine matter to apply the pencil.

A New Star Looms Upon the Screen in Master Sabu, Little East Indian Lad, Who Plays 'Elephant Boy'

Bronze 12-Year-Old Exerts Remarkable Appeal in Kipling Story of Indian Jungles; Red Skelton on Way Up; West Coast Production at Peak; The Postman Keeps Pushing That Bell; News Notes of the Amusement World.

A NEW juvenile film star is about to loom over the Washington horizon in the person of Sabu, a 12-year-old brown-skinned East Indian lad, who possesses the most ingratiating personality for one of his years that has been disclosed since the advent of Freddie Bartholomew to the American cinema.

BELL.

It was Sabu who was selected by Producer Alexander Korda, of London Films, and Director Robert Flaherty to play the title role in "Elephant Boy," the superb picturization of Rudyard Kipling's story of "Toomai of the Elephants," with which the Rialto Theater on Sunday will signalize its change of policy from revivals to first-run pictures never before seen in the Capital.

This subject demonstrates again Robert Flaherty's peculiar ability to wring fascinating drama from remote and little known locales. He did it in "Nanook of the North" and in "Man of Aran" and now repeats the feat in "Elephant Boy," a story of the wild places that is totally lacking in "feminine heart interest" and that confines itself to the direct pursuit of a tale of elephant hunting in the jungles of India and a small boy's insatiable ambition to be known as a great hunter, as his great-grandfather, grandfather and father had been before him.

Despite the absence of all that boy-meets-girl business, there is an emotional tug exerted by "Elephant Boy" that stamps it as a real achievement. The same, of course, was true of "Captains Courageous"—which ought to begin to impress upon the minds of Hollywood producers that good drama is good drama, of whatever gender.

Just as Freddie Batholomew lent "Captains Courageous" its dominant appeal, so does Sabu imbue "Elephant Boy" with a gentle, sympathetic and, at times, infinitely pathetic quality of naturalness that strikes straight to the heart. This little bronze fellow is endowed with a magnificent physique for a boy of his age, has large and expressive dark eyes that seem to possess the depths of the heavens and a smile that is irresistibly expressive.

One is given to believe that after the picture as completed, Sabu, who speaks perfectly understandable English that is only slightly accented, was taken to England to make personal appearances in conjunction with the first showings of the film. In fact, I believe he is still there. This would not be too high a reward for the uncommonly fine work he does as Toomai.

The costar of the picture, I should say, is the towering elephant that is Toomai's constant companion and protective friend. This gigantic pachyderm, which seems about the size of the legendary Jumbo brought to this country by the late P. T. Barnum, is a sagacious companion for his small master and an admirable actor in the bargain. He also was taken to London for "personal" appearances and it is reported that both Sabu and he were lionized—if you can do with the scrambled zoology—by London society.

Not to recommend "Elephant Boy" to all lovers of unusual drama would be a definite dereliction of duty. See it.

Red Skelton, the elongated comic, headlining the stage portion of the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater for a second week, beginning today, seems to be pointed for bigger and better things. Red combines with a thoroughly agreeable personality a vast versatility as an entertainer. This fact seems to have seeped through to the "higher-ups." His most recent—and one of his most flattering—offers is to appear on the Rudy Vallee program over a Nation-wide radio hook-up on Thursday night, August 12. In addition to this, Red is under option to one of the major picture producing companies on the West Coast, which it is expected will be taken up as soon as Master Skelton has fulfilled his vaudeville commitments, which already have extended approximately six months beyond the period for which he was originally signed. Nice going is what I always say.

Furnish Fun in New Screen Comedy

While Robert Montgomery and Marion Davies are the costars of "Ever Since Eve," opening on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater today, a great deal of the film's laughability springs from the contributions to its hilarity by Patsy Kelly and Allen Jenkins, pictured above. Miss Kelly and Mr. Jenkins seem to be in Hawaiian waters, but they are just as funny in Honolulu as they are in Hollywood—you can lei to that!

Film Art Group Announces New Program Series

Museum Library Compiles Film Series Four for National Showing.

John E. Abbott, director of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, announces Film Series IV: Memorable American Films and the Swedish Film, consisting of eight seprate programs to be released by the Film Library in the fall for circulation to museums, colleges, and film study groups throughout the country. The first program in Film Series IV will illustrate the work of the two eminent Swedish directors, Victor Seastrom and Mauritz Stiller, both of whom made important contributions to the development of the art of the motion picture and whose influence extended to this country.

The second and third programs complement the first by showing one silent feature, "The Wind," directed by Seastrom in America, and the first talking film of Stiller's discovery and protege, Greta Garbo. Garbo also appears in the first program in the much earlier Swedish-made "Story of Gosta Berling," directed by Stiller.

In addition, the new series will include several historically important American films. Among these will be the first notable war-film made after Armistice, Rex Ingram's "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" with Rudolph Valentino. This should form an interesting contrast with "All Quiet on the Western Front" made in 1930 and shown in the Film Library's first series. The early development of the musical talkie in "The Love Parade," and the much discussed "Little Caesar," with Edward G. Robinson, will also be shown, as will Buster Keaton's ingenious comedy "The Navigator" and Eric von Stroheim's grimly realistic "Greed."

Auxiliary Programs.

As supplementary programs the Film Library provides the unforgettable "Birth of a Nation," directed by D. W. Griffith in 1915; a recent Swedish talking film, the documentary "Grass," made in Northwest Persia by Cooper and Schoedsack in 1925, and two other features. In this way Series IV carries further the plan of the first three series, in which the development of the motion picture was shown by outstanding examples of films from this country and also from Germany and France.

In its first and second seasons, 1935-1936 and 1936-1937, the Film Library acquired 700 films, which are being permanently preserved, and issued three series of five complete programs each for a first-hand study of the history of the motion picture in this country and in Europe. These series have been shown by 125 colleges, museums and adult education groups throughout the United States. With each program the Film Library sends extensive program notes and, in the case of silent films, a complete piano score.

Complete Listings.

"The Outlaw and His Wife," directed by Victor Seastrom, a powerful psychological drama ten years in advance of its date.

"The Story of Gosta Berling," directed by Mauritz Stiller. In this, Greta Garbo played her first important role. Both films acquired through the courtesy of Svensk Filmindustri.

"The Wind," directed by Victor Seastrom, with Lillian Gish and Lars Hansen. Acquired through the courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"The Navigator," with Buster Keaton. Acquired through the courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Little Caesar," directed by Mervyn LeRoy, with Edward G. Robinson. Acquired through the courtesy of Warner Brothers.

Supplementary programs:

"The Birth of a Nation," directed by D. W. Griffith. Acquired through the courtesy of Harry Aitken.

"The General," a comedy with a Civil War setting with Buster Keaton. Acquired through the courtesy of United Artists.

"The Unholy Three," a mystery film directed by Tod Browning, with Lon Chaney and Victor McLaglen. Acquired through the courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

They still keep the postman busy ringing that bell. All the way from 3096 Lake Hollywood drive, Los Angeles, Calif., comes the following personally written note from the young man who leaped to instant favor by the excellence of his performance in the title role of "Kid Galahad," his first picture:

"Dear Mr. Bell: Let me thank you a million for the swell boosts you gave me in your paper. I surely appreciate all the good breaks and boosts I've been getting and can assure you that I'm working very hard to try to live up to them. I'm in 'D-1,' a submarine picture, with Pat O'Brien and George Brent now and hope I can turn in another good performance. Many thinks again, sincerely,

(Signed) BERT (WAYNE) MORRIS."

Then there is a card from the Yates Sisters, graduates from the ranks of Washington amateurs, who seem pleased with their current engagement at the Hotel Cavalier, Virginia Beach, and a note from Ed Rudley, musical director of the Major Bowes unit that played the Capitol recently, in which he confides that his Washington notices did much to boost his stock in the estimation of his bosses.

Thoughtful of all these nice people to take the trouble.

Today is the day that the exclusive Washington first-run engagement of the coronation pictures in Technicolor begins at the Trans-Lux Theater. Not only is the pageantry of the occasion registered in natural color, but the film also includes many close-ups of the royal family of England. That rainstorm, incidentally, is said to have been kind to the Technicolor operators, the pictures being remarkably clear.

Dim-Recollection Note.

We used to call sudden late-afternoon downpours, like yesterday's, "departmental showers" in the old days. They never miss the closing hour.

In Hollywood
With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, July 15.—The screen star who refuses to sidetrack whatever he may be doing in order to sign autographs for every Tom, Dick and Harry who demands them is always criticized. "We made him a star—how does he get that way?" his disgruntled fans complain, and it must be admitted there is justice in their criticism. But it strikes me as ironic that the same autograph hunters who put him on the pan never bother to praise the many stars who always are willing to sign their albums.

GINGER ROGERS.

I never cease to marvel at the unfailing courtesy of such stars as Ginger Rogers, Joan Crawford, John Boles, Richard Arlen and Gary Cooper. They—and dozens of others as considerate—seem to have the patience of Job and the endurance of a marathon runner. Persistent autograph hunters may be keeping them from the first fight on the program, the first act of the play or the first course of a dinner—but they go on signing without making a single complaint.

Gadding about town with Dick Arlen or Bing Crosby, I have had to twiddle my thumbs for 30 minutes at a time while my companions signed autographs. The delay always gave me the jitters, but their attitude in effect, if not in words, seemed to be: "I owe the public a lot—why complain?"

There should be an order of merit for stars of their kind—and a black list for those who completely ignore their fans.

The whole world knows that Shirley Temple has beautiful blonde curls, but few people know how many. In fact, Shirley herself was befuddled when I asked her the other day. "Wait a minute," she said, "and I'll have mother count them." Mother did, and Shirley has exactly fifty-one ringlets. They are put up each night on curlers by Mrs. Temple.

This morning, in the M.-G.-M. wardrobe department, I saw something which proves that the heart of Hollywood is not as hard as some of our detractors would have you believe. A veteran character actor was being fitted out with a clown's costume. One was handed to him and he started to put it on then stopped, trembling with emotion. "I can't wear that," he protested. "Lon Chaney wore it in 'Laugh, Clown, Laugh.' He was the best friend I've ever had—and so great an actor that it would be sacrilege to wear that costume."

Strolling past the home of Anita Louise today, I saw her navigating about the front yard in a wheel chair, so I stopped to offer my sympathy and to inquire how she had been injured. She laughed and told me that she had never felt better in her life—that she was merely rehearsing for a role in which she will play an invalid. "You wouldn't believe how difficult it is for a novice to manage one of these things," she explained. "Try it for yourself." I did—and I think she is a genius at understatement.

Woman Found In Train Tank With Dead Man

Young Matron Is Injured, Friend Killed Riding Water Tender.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., July 15.—A disappointing search for work ended in death for a man and injuries to a woman companion aboard a Chesapeake & Ohio locomotive water tender near here today.

Mrs. Mamie Montgomery, 25, of Roanoke, suffering from a severe scalp wound, was found holding the head of Reginald Hawse, 19, of Covington, above water in the tank when the train stopped here this morning.

Hawse, apparently knocked into the water compartment by a low-hanging bridge, was dead.

The woman, who said she lived with her mother, Mrs. J. C. Linkswiler, Roanoke, told Coroner C. W. Rodgers she and Hawse went to Washington Tuesday to seek work, but after failing to find jobs boarded the train last night to return home.

They climbed on the tender, she said, and later decided to go down into the water compartment to avoid smkoe as the train passed through tunnels.

After passing through a mile-long tunnel east of Waynesboro, the woman said they climbed out again and a short while later were struck on the back of their heads.

Central Library To Be Open Fridays

The central building of the Public Library will be open today and all Fridays hereafter from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., according to an announcement made yesterday by Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian.

This resumption of full time hours for the central building is one of the benefits accruing to Washington residents from the increased appropriation for library personnel included in the appropriation act for the District of Columbia for the current fiscal year.

"Since October 21, 1932, it has been necessary to close the library at 1 o'clock on Friday because of lack of staff to cover the full 12 hours of opening throughout the week," Dr. Bowerman stated. "At present the library closes at 4 p. m. on Saturday only during the summer months from July 3 through September 11."

Roof of Theater Torn Off in Gale

Monroe, Mich., July 15 (AP).—A wind, rain and electrical storm tonight caused considerable damage and left Monroe without lights or power. Fifty persons in a theater escaped injury when the storm ripped off the roof and tossed it against a grocery store across the street, caving in the front.

The storm struck a section from Monroe to Detroit, and Wyandotte was partly without lights. In Belleville a man was killed by lightning, and at Detroit ten passengers were taken to a hospital when lightning struck a street car.

The Post's New Yorker
By LEONARD LYONS

NEW YORK, July 15.

PLIGHT: Erskine Caldwell, author of "Tobacco Road," and Margaret Bourke-White, the photographer, are collaborating on a book to be called "You Have Seen Their Faces." It will concern the Georgia sharecroppers. They visited Georgia recently and came upon a chain-gang. When Miss Bourke-White tried to photograph the scene, the chain-gang captain shouted: "Get t'hell outa here!" They retreated and tried to film the scene from their car. "If you do," the captain warned, "I'll shoot your tires off" . . . Caldwell contacted the local editor, who got the County Commissioner to give them a letter authorizing them to photograph the chain-gang. Triumphantly they returned to the scene and presented the letter . . . "Get t'hell outa here," the captain shouted. "The Commissioner knows damwell I can't read!"

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: Sam Goldwyn interviewed Garson Kanin, the George Abbott assistant he wanted to hire. They discussed the employment, and Goldwyn seemed impatient. "Look how nice it'll be working here," Goldwyn painted. "You can have the nice office next to mine, a very nice secretary, and I'll even get you a wife—right out of my own 'Goldwyn Follies!'"

• • • •

OPPORTUNITY: The song publishers already have four Amelia Earhart songs, submitted by tunesmiths and ready for publication.

• • • •

CRITICISM: Patience, the 11-year-old member of the Abbe children, who wrote the best-selling "Around the World in Eleven Years," visited Hollywood recently and met Shirley Temple. Patience didn't confide her reactions when she was interviewed. To her intimates, however, she confessed that she wasn't very much impressed. "I'd like to know one thing," the book-writing Patience belittled. "What can Shirley Temple write—except her name!"

• • • •

FAME: At the New Amsterdam Theater, two days ago, the feature picture was "Here's That Man Again." The marquee displayed the names of Hugh Herbert and Teddy Hart in lights. When Hart, who merely has an auxiliary role in that picture, was asked how come his name was cofeatured with that of the star, he made full confession. "The house manager," he explained, "is an old pal o' mine!"

• • • •

SIMPLICITY: When Kipling's "Elephant Boy" was purchased for the screen recently, the producers called in their writers and instructed them with regard to the adaptation. "It's a cinch," they directed. "Just remember it isn't very much different from the other movies. All you got to remember is the fundamental principle—Boy Meets Elephant, Boy Loses Elephant, Boy Gets Elephant!"

• • • •

EFFICIENCY: Beatrice Lillie sails for London Friday night. But this voyage will be somewhat different from the one she made last year. At that time she booked her trip through the American Express Co., whose officials were most anxious to see that provision would be made for even the minutest details . . . And so when Beatrice Lillie, in private life Lady Peel, arrived at Southampton, there was the American Express representative, bearing every preparation for emergency—including letters of introduction to three respectable British families!

• • • •

RESOLVE: Lew Brice is in Hollywood now, preparing to go into the production of movies. "What are your plans?" Brice was asked . . . "Well," he admitted, "we're not going to make any serious pictures. Only comedies. Because when you make a serious picture—it's got to be good."

• • • •

PRIDE: Al Jolson phoned Bing Crosby at the racetrack Crosby just opened in California. "What's the weather like out there?" Jolson asked . . . "It's marvelous here," the perspiring Crosby replied. "It's simply marvelous. Al, you wouldn't believe me, but out here—it's just like summer!"

• • • •

ANNOYANCE: The physician in the emergency ward at Bellevue Hospital has been annoyed by the incessant phone calls from reporters inquiring about the total number of heat victims brought into that institution . . . After four days of these phone calls, the doctor shrieked at a reporter: "Where's the news in heat victims at this time of the year? Why don't you guys wait—until somebody stumbles in here with a case of chilblains?"

ESCAPE: Jay Carlisle, the Wall Street broker, tried to dissuade his father from purchasing planes for his younger brother—who had evinced interest in aviation. The senior Carlisle, however, paid no heed to Jay and presented the planes . . . Next week Jay Carlisle leaves for Reno to establish residence there to secure his divorce. In order to preserve his brokerage business, Mr. Carlisle already has arranged to be flown from Reno to Los Angeles every day, there to conduct his stock transactions, and then to be flown back at night. The flights will be made on the private planes owned by his younger brother.

Middle Europe Danger Is Cited By Dr. Pergler

National Law School Dean Warns Md. U. Students of Hitler's Aims.

The statesmen of the world will make a serious mistake if in their anxiety to preserve peace in the Mediterranean and the Far East they overlook the menacing situation in Central Europe, Dr. Charles Pergler told University of Maryland students yesterday.

Dr. Pergler, dean of National University law school, said Hitler is seeking the domination if not the destruction Czechoslovakia through diplomacy and propaganda, which "usually prepare the way for forcible measures."

Dr. Perglers aid Germany is trying to bolster its case by making two charges—first, that Czechoslovakia is mistreating the German minority there, and second, that the country is an advance guard of communism. The law dean said there is no truth in either charge.

Appealing for enlightened statesmanship in dealing with the Central European problem, Dr. Pergler added:

"The independent existence of Czechoslovakia is a general European asset for real peace. Should the powers permit Czechoslovakia to be absorbed partially or wholly by Germany, or even to be dominated from Berlin, they will rue the day. For then Germany would realize its old dream of a Mittel Europa, and would become the dominant European, if not world, power."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 15

AS A VETERAN of stuffy movie star parties, I have just come back from one that beats the lot for novelty and unspoiled charm. I was bidden to a rehearsal hall in our Paramount building, to meet and greet Martha Raye, the new comedy sensation of the flickers. She is appearing in person at the theater this week, attracting the biggest summer business in the history of the house. Into the room came Miss Martha, after her stage turn, wearing not the flossy tea gown usually affected by Hollywood dream girls, but a simple cotton Paisley wrapper. The film advertising has libeled the Raye girl, emphasizing the Joe E. Brown dimensions of her comedy mouth. In reality, Martha's mouth is really a very pretty feature in repose. And she is a handsome girl when not at her buffoonery. In addition, she has the somewhat seraphic look of a new bride, having been recently married to one of the famouse Westmore makeup men of the film colony.

ALICE HUGHES.

Martha had had as romantic and dramatic a rise to movie fame as any girl in the history of that goofy business. Not much more than a year ago she was a fairly unsuccessful night club performer along Swing Alley, that astonishing block on West Fifty-second street which has some 25 hotspots. At that time she was said to be in love with Louis Prima, who hits the hottest of hot lips on the trumpet. Most of her New York pals at her Paramount party were the nightclub entertainers who were her friends before the movies tapped her for glory. A likeable, natural and pretty girl, this newly famous clown. How I hope that another year of Hollywood success will leave her the same unaffected child, free from all the chi-chi which seems to be the ultimate curse of the movie stars.

Probably due to the heat that is melting human sanity right and left, there are people here and there in this town who pooh-pooh Amelia Earhart's flying reputation; who say she had no business making this last trip of hers; that the Government had no business spending that much money 'searching for her; that she is no great loss and will not be missed. I disagree in every instance, and the last assumption makes me furious. I could name on one hand and still have two or three fingers left the people I know who have become famous, and who have stayed unspoiled. Plenty of them go in for big-time modesty, a kind of false humility which is as obnoxious as the worst case of swell-headedness. But not Amelia. She hadn't a false note in her. She never let anything go to her head. Never dressed up fancy, or put on airs. She had good horse sense and a friendly, sincere manner; she went out of her way to help people. She lived, when in New York, in a draughty old-fashioned hotel. I am sure she had plenty of opportunities to move to Park avenue. Loads of wealthy nobodies have, to my knowledge, offered her their estates to live on. But she lived her own life, simple, friendly. The disappearance of such a person is a loss. She will be missed.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Three good light versifiers; all about to bring out books this fall are Selma Robinson, Phyllis McGinley and Margaret Fishback.

Another novel is due from Helen Grace Carlisle, whose first two books were smash hits the like of which she never has equaled in four later novels. Those first two were "See How They Run," and "Mothers Cry." Remember them? I remember Helen Grace when—as I do Ursula Parrott, with whom I used to share a duplex apartment opposite the Princeton Club when she was writing "Ex-Wife." Her first two books were also her best-sellers: "Ex-Wife" and "Strangers May Kiss."

Hat Definitely Dates a Woman, Declares Artist Who Believes It Is Criterion of Chic Ensemble

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

YOUR HAT definitely dates you. A dress or suit may be worn for several seasons and with clever accessories may appear to be of the current styling, but a hat is not "so kind to the purse," according to Nancy Van Court, noted silhouette artist who has been spending the summer at Virginia Beach, Va. Miss Van Court, who with a deft scissors cuts your silhouette, and at the same time reads your character by the shape of your nose, size of chin, set of eyes and the like, says that she notices a hat first, before she is aware of the rest of the costume. "The hat," she commented, "is the barometer to a chic ensemble."

Concentrating on line, as she does in cutting silhouettes, Miss Van Court naturally believes that line is more important than color when selecting a costume for any occasion. However, she maintains that color really exists even in black and white, if the lines are interesting, and also because of the dramatic contrast of these two smart colors. This artist who works exclusively in black always wears gay colors herself; usually dark satin smocks with orange, bright blue, rose or green beret and Windsor tie. "There is interesting psychology in the selection of color," Miss Van Court explained. "Orange, for instance, means that a person wearing this vibrant tone is ambitious. Green is usually allied with success."

Applying Cosmetics, An Art.

Miss Van Court, a graduate of two art schools in San Francisco, and from a long line of ancestral artists in oils, water colors and other media, has made a thorough study of present-day makeup. "Consider your face a blank canvas," she advises, "and be very careful of the cosmetics you apply to make an interesting and colorful picture. A small amount of rouge, powder in the right color, deftly applied, discreet use of eyeshadow and careful pencilling of the eyebrows—these constitute her recipe for smart and natural-looking modern complexions. "Since the hair is the frame for this picture, it is most important that the coiffure enhances rather than detracts from the general scene," she said.

"If you want to understand people," advises Miss Van Court, "study their noses and chins. I learned character study by way of the features, from my father, who was a portrait painter, and even as a small child found reading character much more absorbing than reading history or geography," she said.

If you want to diagnose yourself, here are some rules used by Miss Van Court in her "silhouette analysis" and which she says are infallible guides:

Slim, streamlined faces are built for speed, these persons are always in a hurry. When forehead slopes backward, it designates rapid-thought action, and a sloping chin means quick activity. Strong noses denote artistic qualities and independence; large eyes belong to talkative persons, and if they are deep-set, they mean deep thinking without expressing these thoughts in casual conversation.

Here is Miss Nancy Van Court's idea of her own appearance. She is a silhouette artist, who reads character in features, as she deftly cuts with her scissors.

Mobile mouths belong to those who are sensitive; a long upper lip and independence are synonymous; while a short upper lip usually implies that the owner is dependent upon flattery for happiness.

Women Harder to Read.

Miss Van Court, who has a studio in the Cavalier Hotel for the summer, says that in analyzing people while cutting their silhouettes, she has discovered that all persons are more artistic than is generally supposed—even by themselves. She also believes that everyone has some special talent that could be developed, but that comparatively few really find their proper niche in the world. "Women are much harder to read than men," she said. "They are more mysterious than the male and therefore, I feel, have more depth."

Advice Offered For Arranging Various Parties

Honored Guest Always Should Be Told in Advance.

GUESTS of honor present their special problems of etiquette. Should one give a "surprise" party honoring a friend? Should the consent of the guest of honor at function be obtained in advance?

The first question is raised in the following letter:

"I am giving a party for my aunt who will visit me in a few weeks. I intend to have her as the guest of honor at dinner. Will it be proper to surprise her? She knows about the dinner but does not know that she is to be the guest of honor. She may not like it as she is a very modest person. In sending out the invitations, Do I have to say 'to meet Mrs. Williams ' It seems rather silly to me as most of the people who are coming to the dinner know my aunt very well."

A Serious Breach.

It never is proper to give a party for a person without consulting the person in advance. In the case cited above, it will be a serious breach of etiquette if the writer does not inform her aunt she is to be the honor guest at the dinner. It will be especially bad form because she thinks her aunt might not like it. It is not good manners to insist on honoring a person who does not wish to be honored.

It would be correct to say, "in honor of Mrs. Williams" rather than "to meet Mrs. Williams," since the guests all know her well. "In honor off" is better form under any circumstances than "to meet."

Another correspondent is in a state of great distress of mind because her guests of honor did not arrive for her dinner. She writes:

"I decided to give a dinner in honor of some friends who were to be in Washington for a few days. I wrote to them and told them the date of the dinner and that they were to be guests of honor. Then I sent out my invitations in honor 'of Mr. and Mrs. Smith.' I did not hear from Mr. and Mrs. Smith but expected them to arrive for the dinner.

Hostess at Fault.

"When they did not come, I called their hotel and told them my dinner party was waiting. They informed me that they were at dinner at the hotel. They had left their home before my letter arrived telling them of my dinner party. I insisted that they must come over at once. But they said that they had a guest with them and could not come and that they had important work to do that night. I consider them very rude. I think that I did everything that etiquette required in notifying them that they were to be guests of honor and inviting them with a personal letter to dine with us."

The hostess was in fault in this matter. It was very improper to take it for granted that Mr. and Mrs. Smith would attend a dinner in their honor. It was improper to send out invitations before they had given their consent. There was no reason that they should leave their guest and come to the dinner since they had not been properly invited and had not accepted the invitation.

Numbered Glasses.

Paris (U.P.).—Numbered cocktail or highball glasses are the rule rather than the exception at French parties. Guests can set down their drinks without being afraid that someone else will take the glass by mistake. The numbers are in silver or in a composition material and are clipped upon the top of the glass.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Boy Breaks Date, Goes on Lengthy Business Trip, Without Notifying Fiance; She Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19 years old. Last February I started going with a boy a few years older. When we first started going together we would go to the movies and to dances; then, after about three months, we would just go for rides. I didn't mind, for we planned to be married and he was paying bills and saving money.

* * * *

About two weeks ago he was to call me on a certain evening. He failed to do so and a few days later I telephoned him at his office and was told he was out of town on a business trip. I was very much upset. I communicated with a member of his family, who was very nice about it, and told me not to worry, that he would write, but to date I haven't heard from him.

* * * *

From the very first he has never telephoned or arrived promptly at the time set; he has always been from 15 minutes to half an hour late. Also, he once borrowed money from me (only a few dollars) and has never repaid it. Still I know he cared a great deal for me, judging from the way he acted and the things he said. Therefore, I haven't the slightest idea why he is acting this way. I miss him very much.

When he comes back, if he wishes to see me, should I go regularly with him again? I have his class ring; do you think I should return it to him? Should I start going out with other boys? Please tell me what to do, and why you think he has acted this way. WONDERING.

Have Done With Him.

DEAR WONDERING: The root-cause of the boy's distressing conduct is lack of fine character. He lacks a sense of fair play, courtesy and kindliness. Had he possessed these attributes, he would not—indeed, he could not—have left town without communicating his plans to you, the girl he professed to love. He has revealed the coldness and undependability of his nature. My advice to you, therefore, is to return his ring, break the engagement, and turn your attention to other beaux immediately. M. H.

Wants Nose Reshaped.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This, I know, is a strange question to ask. But as I have noticed before, you are frequently called upon to deal with questions just as queer. I am considered an attractive girl, except for one thing—and that is an imperfect nose. I would like to be advised if there is a place in Washington where plastic surgery is performed successfully; and whether or not you think it would be possible to have a nose reshaped by surgery. I have always been an admirer of nice noses, and I hate mine. Thanking you sincerely and assuring you that I am a constant reader of your advice, I am, yours truly, JUANITA.

* * * *

DEAR JUANITA: The Physicians & Surgeons' Exchange, 25 Quincy street, Chevy Chase, telephone Wisconsin 3053, can tell you if there are reputable plastic surgeons in Washington. I have read of persons having their noses reshaped by surgery, but whether such operations turned out to the complete satisfaction of the noses' owners, naturally I do not know. I should call it a hazardous and expensive experiment; and should think cultivated mind and manners and meticulous grooming would more than offset the presumable handicap of even the most unshapely nose. M. H.

Advice for 'Hopeless.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In regard to the letter from "Hopeless," in your column of July 4, I want to say that I have a friend who had the same experience with her husband, and to my way of thinking, she handled the situation very wisely. When she learned of her husband's infidelity (her friends had known of it for some time) she did not leave him, although she was deeply hurt and humiliated. She and her husband discussed the subject once, and then she said it was never to be mentioned again.

* * * *

She realized that she had not been perfect; that she had probably taken him too much for granted, had probably neglected him for her children and friends; and in forgiving, she asked forgiveness. At any rate, the children still have both father and mother and a real home life. In fact, the painful incident seems to have been turned to profit by this couple, as their life together today seems happier, fuller and better than ever before.

* * * *

It seems a shame to make children suffer for parents' mistakes. If "Hopeless'" husband is sorry and still wants her to return, I think she should be big enough to forgive and forget and stop pitying herself. There are many women whose husbands are not repentant and who don't care what their wives think, feel or do. Sincerely,

GOOD WILL.

Unusual Touch Value Stressed By Anita Louise

The unusual touch is what makes for distinctive dress in women, in the opinion of Anita Louise, motion picture star. Anita likes evening clothes, but always will make them stand out by using at least one striking accessory. Recently she wore long kid mitts of pale lavendar which had a tiny sheaf of little yellow roses growing on each back. Anita has seven rules for success in clothes. Here they are:

"1. Cleanliness. It's better to have an accessory that doesn't perfectly match an ensemble than to wear a soiled one that does.

"2. Over-matching. If too many accessories match an outfit has a deliberate, studied appearance. I particularly dislike to see a hat of the very same material as the dress. A good rule to follow is to blend hose and shoes as closely as possible to the skirt or dress. Gloves, bag and scarf may go together or gloves, bag and hat. Rarely should the six major accessories be of the same color.

"3. Following trends. There are enough different styles every season so that any girl can find something that flatters.

"4. Seasons. Don't rush them. Frequently the cuts and fabrics that are pushed the hardest the first of the season are out of date in another month.

"5. Colors. Cling to the shades that compliment your own coloring.

"6. Originality. Make up some things, such as a new way to tie a scarf or a new place for a hanky.

Women Thinner, Authority Holds

Exercise, balanced diets and the demands of modern society have changed girls from the buxom belles of the eighties into the slender maidens of today, according to D. A. O. DeWeese, head of the Kent State University health department.

"Formerly a girl was expected to be heavy because it was then thought that a woman's foremost duty was child-bearing," Dr. DeWeese said recently, "but modern thought has changed to feel that a girl should be slender, lithe and feminine.

"Movie authorities have determined that the modern girl should be 5 feet 2 inches tall and weigh 105 pounds. This is quite different from the weight of the popular chorus girl of the last Eighteen Hundreds," Dr. DeWeese said.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

An important development in modern medicine is plastic surgery. Those surgeons who make a specialty of this are real beauty operators. Naturally the face is the part of the body to which they pay most attention.

I suppose that about half the babies born into the world have one or more little red marks on the face. Indeed they are commonly called birthmarks. These worry the mother, especially if it is a girl baby. But in almost every instance they fade and disappear by the age of five or six. They are due to the overdevelopment of the tiny blood vessels just under the surface of the skin. Sometimes they are larger and of a deep red or purplish color—port wine marks. These will not disappear and should be removed, particularly if they show a tendency to grow. They may reach large proportions, and then their destruction leaves a defect which will require skin grafting to fill in.

Moles which are found on the baby's face are of a wide variety. They are forms of tumors and are due to an overgrowth of the skin structure. They may be flat, elevated, warty or hairy. Although they are regarded as marks of beauty in Oriental countries, the American mother is not easily reconciled to them. They can be removed easily in most cases by electrolysis or surgery.

Scars are also in the field of the plastic surgeon. Most scars on the face in infancy come from burns and most of them from scalding water. Prevention is, therefore, the first point to emphasize. Little children playing in the kitchen upset a tea kettle or a pan of boiling water on the stove that is too high for them to lift—statistics show this is the one most frequent cause of facial burns in early life. When, in spite of eternal vigilance, it has happened, the modern plastic surgeon can be called upon with perfect confidence that he will be able to remove the scar and restore the face to a very good appearance of normal.

Scars which are themselves small may be so placed that they produce a deformity by traction on the eyelids, mouth or nose. These should be removed, because if left they will prevent proper development of the organ involved.

Of accidents to the face in infancy, fractured nose is the most common. First attempts at walking, with subsequent falls, and the games and fights of later childhood, all endanger particularly the nose. Any accident with considerable nosebleed may be a fractured nose, and it is best to assume a fracture of some of these delicate bones until it is proved otherwise. There is a piece of gossip that is frequently passed on to young parents that the bones of the nose should be left alone until maturity. This is a fallacy, and fractured or deformed noses should be corrected in childhood, otherwise they will lead to loss of normal function and maldevelopment.

Woman Banker Believes Her Sex Badly Underpaid

Women have "a terrible inferiority complex when it comes to getting the salaries they deserve for the work they do, believes Miss Gordon Holmes, noted London banker visiting in the United States.

Women place too low an evaluation on their own services, Miss Holmes recently told the Associated Press in New York. She said a woman often "has to be 10 times as well-equipped as a man to hold the same job and even then probably doesn't get the same pay."

"I do not mean to say anything against men," she hastened to explain. "Human nature is so constituted that it hardly ever wants to pay more than it must pay."

She said she has found men in business "an exceedingly sporting lot, on the whole."

"You can't say, of course, that all men are willing to recognize merit when they see it. But men are human, and in general all human beings admire merit and brains. You show them, and they take off their hats to you."

Miss Holmes entered the financial world as a stenographer in a London bond house at £1 a week.

3 Popular Melons With New Dress of Fruit Make Tasty Summer Desserts or Appetizers

Dash of Lemon or Lime Enhances Flavor of Honeydews.

Cantaloupe Ring With Berries or Sherbet Is Attractive.

By Rebekah Blake.

THERE is something about the tinkle of ice in tall glasses, the gentle swish of crisp greens as they are tossed lightly about in a chilled bowl, the glorious color notes of the fruits of the season, that bids you set tables in keeping with summer time. Most certainly styles in foods, as in frocks, change with the season. The daily three meals, like people, cannot always wear the same clothes.

Nothing is easier to serve as a summer dessert or appetizer than the popular melon trio—cantaloupe, watermelon and honeydew. Their colors and enticing flavors make them especially attractive.

Pick ripe, well-formed melons of moderate size. Good cantaloupes and honeydews have a distinct melon aroma. Watermelons may be plugged by purchasers who want to test their flavor or appearance.

Wash each melon, wrap it in waxed paper — to prevent the aroma from permeating other foods —and store it in the refrigerator. (It is much better to store melons in a cold place for several hours than to cut them in halves and fill the halves with chopped ice. The melting ice destroys much of the flavor.)

Limes Help Flavor.

If you choose to serve cantaloupe or honeydew melon alone, the flavor is enhanced if wedges of lemon or lime are offered with it.

Cantaloupe rings are effective desserts. Cut the melon in 1-inch crossway slices, place the flat sides up on a serving platter and fill the centers of the slices with berries, pineapple, watermelon, mint sherbet or lime ice cream.

Watermelon usually is cut in halves and then in wedges. It may, however be served in crossway slices or cut into small boxes and filled with fruits, berries or balls from other melons.

Try mixing chilled melon balls with grape juice, ginger ale or orange or raspberry juice for a refreshing drink. The drink should be served almost frozen to bring out the delicate flavors.

Mint also harmonizes with melons. Add a few mint leaves to a thin sugar sirup. Chill and strain the sirup and pour it over melon slices or balls.

Crisp, cool and colorful—this is the dress our tables should wear in the summer. This suggests a bowl of salad greens, slim green wedges of avocado, balls of orange hue scooped out of a cantaloupe, and the gold of half slices of canned pineapple glinting through. The whole to be dressed with a mixture of oil and fruit juices and served with hot cheese biscuits and a glass of iced tea.

For a cool and colorful dessert or appetizer for summer meals, mix seasonable fruits and melons as pineapple, berries, cherries, cantaloupe, watermelon and honeydew and serve them in a hollowed-out cantaloupe shell. A sprig of mint on top will lend more color.

Old Dish Dressed Up.

Cantaloupe a la mode may be given a new version by topping the ice cream with crushed pineapple. To be a bit dressy, arrange a well-chilled slice of pineapple upon a thin cut of melon and top with ice cream.

For the luncheon, dinner or buffet supper where smartness is desired and men are to be pleased, serve berry-melon salad bowl with sour cream mayonnaise.

Berry-Melon Salad Bowl.

1 cantaloupe
½ honeydew melon
1 pint berries
Sour cream mayonnaise

All melons should be served very cold. The pulps of cantaloupe and melon may be shaped in balls with French vegetable cutter, or diced or be scooped out in large spoonfuls.

Wipe out the salad bowl with cut side of clove of garlic. Line with crisp lettuce leaves. Arrange with hulled berries, cantaloupe and honeyball or honeydew melon. Serve with sour cream mayonnaise.

Sour Cream Mayonnaise.

½ cup sour cream, whipped
½ cup mayonnaise
2½ tablespoons confectioner's sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Fold sour cream, sugar and lemon juice into real mayonnaise. Makes 1½ cups mayonnaise.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'M ALL mixed up," confessed a young bride involved for the first time with the intricacies of selecting furniture and deciding on designs for ths and that. "I know Chippendale furniture when I see it, but I can't get straight what else is meant by the terms Georgian or nineteenth century English."

That's a big order! The Georgian usually applies to the styles in furniture prevalent during the reigns of the four Georges who were rulers of England during much of the eighteenth century. Chippendale was only one of the furniture designers whose work was popular during this period. There were also Sheraton, Hepplewhite and the brothers Adam who created quite a different type of furniture, most of it very lovely. These styles of furniture are usually quite congenial to use with Chippendale as well as with each other.

Classical Inspiration.

Robert Adam, the most famous of the Adams, found his inspiration largely in the classical designs excavated at Pompeii and Herculaneum. For the most part the brothers Adam designed everything in a room to harmonize, including the intricate ceilings, the wall panels, mantels and the moldings as well as the rugs and furniture. The colors were mostly very pale tints, particularly a gray-blue, later popularized by Wedgwood.

Hepplewhite first worked in the Adam tradition, but later developed a style of his own, though he always retained something of his classic heritage. The Hepplewhite chair is distinguished by a shield or oval-shaped back and a sweeping curve at the top. The chair arms join the legs in an unbroken sweeping line and chair legs are usually square.

Sheraton chair backs most commonly have a series of vertical lines supported by a bottom rail. Though he did make some shield-shaped backs, he usually broke the curve at the top with a straight line. The arms joined the legs pedestal-fashion with a break and joining. Some of Sheraton's sideboards had convex corners—some were very similar to Hepplewhite's. Sheraton often added a brass railing at the back for plates to rest against.

Copelands Have Dinner Just for Two

Blooms Fill Shoreham Apartment on 29th Anniversary.

Countless Friends Stop to Offer Greetings, Congratulations.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

Mrs. Copeland's guest book was not brought into play last evening when she and Senator Royal S. Copeland celebrated their twenty-ninth wedding anniversary at a dinner-for-two on the Shoreham Terrace. The event was a quiet affair planned only for the pleasure of the couple who walked down the aisle to the strains of Mendelssohn on July 15, 1908, and have managed to be together to celebrate the occasion each year since.

Their plan originally had been to have an informal party at their home, Dexter Manor, near Suffern, N. Y., where Mrs. Copeland spends each summer in a 150-year-old house on the rambling estate that has belonged to the Copeland family for years. But that plan was made long before either the Senator or his wife had any idea Congress would be in session this far into the summer.

Mrs. Copeland Arrived Yesterday

The locale of the celebration had to be changed, therefore, but the party went on just the same. Mrs. Copeland arrived early yesterday to join her husband at the Shoreham, and walked into his apartment there to find it turned into a bower of blossoms arranged especially for her benefit.

Red roses, yellow roses, galdioli and larkspur filled vases and baskets all over the room, and boxes from the florist continued to arrive all afternoon. There were telephone calls, too, throughout the day from Washington friends who remembered the anniversary date, and from relatives in other cities who wanted to offer their congratulations.

At 8 o'clock last evening, Senator and Mrs. Copeland stopped answering their telephone and doorbell and went out on the terrace to have dinner. There, however, they found so many friends that the event was far from a quiet one after all.

Greetings Extended By Many Friends

Throughout the evening, countless persons stopped by the Copelands' table to extend their greetings and offer congratulations. Now and then one would stop long enough afterward to inquire of the Senator whether the report he was to run for mayor of Gotham was true. An emphatic denial invariably was forthcoming. In keeping with a statement he made to a news service yesterday, the Senator declared he had no intention of entering the race.

This morning Senator and Mrs. Copeland will leave Washington to spend the week-end as guests of Capt. George Calver, U. S. N., the Capital physician, at North Beach, Md. On Monday, the Senator will return to Washington, and Mrs. Copeland will go on to their summer home in Suffern.

With her volume, "Mrs. Copeland's Guest Book," still mounting in sales, the author said yesterday she has not yet "recovered from the shock," and has no idea whether she will ever write another. Published only two months ago, it is now in its third edition. While Senator Copeland has celebrated 29 wedding anniversaries with his wife, last evening's was the first at which his partner at the event was the author of a fast-selling book.

Dining on the Shoreham Terrace last evening at tables not far from the Copelands' were a number of informal groups. Among prominent persons glimpsed at different times during the evening were Senator and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, jr., Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones, Eugene Vidal and Mrs. Gerald Linke.

Diplomats, Government Heads Attend Pan American Concert

Dominican Tenor Featured, but Hot Weather Keeps Minister and Mme. Pastoriza at Home; Dinners Precede Affair.

AT A TIME WHEN OFFICIAL ENTERTAINING in Washington is in the doldrums, the Pan-American Union continues to carry on bravely with its series of summer concerts. Last evening practically every Latin-American diplomat who could be mustered on a warm July night attended the second concert this season on the esplanade of the white marble headquarters on Seventeenth street. There was also the usual sprinkling of high-ranking Government officials and members of the State Department, who regularly attend these al fresco musical events.

The Dominican tenor, Alfredo Medina, was the featurd soloist with the United States Navy Band, but the hot weather proved too much for the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, who decided to cling to the comparative coolness of their home in Sherwood Forest last evening.

Dr. L. S. Rowe Welcomes Guests

At his usual post in the doorway stood Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the union, whose custom it is to welcome the guests on their arrival at the concert. He is planning to desert the Capital during August for a vacation of several weeks, but has not yet decided where he will go.

Among the dinners given before the concert was that at which the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Ghirlando entertained. Their guests included the First Secretary of Embassy, Senor Hector Leguizamon, the Naval Attache and Senora de Sueyro and Mrs. Gerald Linke.

In keeping with the informal spirit of social Washington during the summer, guests last evening wore everything from white flannels and street-length sports dresses to flowing evening gowns. That old stand-by, the flowered chiffon, was everywhere.

Many Diplomats And Officials Attend

Among members of the diplomatic corps seen at the concert were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera; the Minister of Finland, Eero Jarnefelt; the Minister of Latvia, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis; the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Busk Codas, the Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante, the Nicaraguan envoy and Senora Brenes Jarquin, the Charge d'Affaires of Portugal, Senora de Deus Ramos, and the Charge d'Affaires of Honduras and Senora de Caceres. In addition there were many members of the staffs of various embassies and legations.

Among the Government officials present were Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary, Senator Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin and Senator and Mrs. Elbert Thomas.

* * * *

Senator James E. Murray entertained informally at dinner at the Shoreham last evening for Carl McFarland, Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Mrs. McFarland and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pope. Mrs. Pope recently arrived from her home in Missoula, Mont., to join Mr. Pope in the Capital, and they will return together to Montana August 1.

Among the guests were Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Senator William H. King, Senator F. Ryan Duffy, Senator Claude Pepper, Senator Ernest Lundeen, Representative Maury Maverick, Representative Robert G. Allen, Representative Eugene J. Keogh and Representative Edouard V. Izac. "Ah, Ambassador, what lovely furnishings you have brought over. This piece, for instance—it's a gem. I've never seen anything like it. In your country, furniture is Art, I see."

Barkers Entice Happy Crowd to Cotton Carnival As Clearing Skies Aid Women's City Club Event

Mrs. Wiley, President, Leads Style Parade in Cake Walk.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Even the weather cooperated last night for the success of the Cotton Carnival of the Women's City Club. The afternoon downpour halted preparations for the alley fete for about two hours. Then skies cleared and out came the Japanese lanterns, balloons, great balloon Mickey Mouses and "concessions" for the carnival patrons.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, club president who led off the fashion parade—one of the features of the program—in a cakewalk with Mr. Frank Birgfeld, temporarily forgot she was one of the stars of the evening. With the other members of the committee, she was directing and helping in last-minute preparations. Not until part of the crowd had assembled and 9 o'clock approached, did she go inside to don her quaint cotton frock of the cakewalk era. It was white with a wide, tucked skirt, and a long, pink ribbon sash. She carried a pink fan which she used as she danced down the alley with Mr. Birgfeld—elegant in a high hat, frock coat and gay vest.

Guests Enter By Side Alley

Carnival patrons, who steadily increased in number as the evening progressed, entered the alley at the rear of the clubhouse through that which runs along the side of Brookings Institution from Jackson place. They were greeted by a colorful scene, with barkers urging them to take chances at the various games and vendors in bright costumes, calling their wares. Miss Nell V. Price, chief of the vendors, was selling cigarets. When the hot dogs went on sale she patronized the stand and never let her right hand, with the basket of cigarets, know that in her left she had a hot dog firmly clutched—she went right on selling her wares as she ate.

Everyone enjoyed the carnival. The members of the club, led by their president, tossed formality to the winds and entered into the spirit of the occasion. There was music throughout the evening and many of the guests sat in the chairs arranged at one end and along the sides of the alley to listen and watch the rest of the crowd. Others went through the garden gate, up the flagged walk and into the clubhouse, where fortunes were told by Mrs. Ellis Meredith, Mrs. Samuel A. Kimberly, Mrs. Jessie A. Hoover and Mrs. Celeste Mumford. Miss Clara Saunders was in charge of the fortunetellers' booths.

Present Varied Entertainment

Club members who modeled in the style show included Mrs. Phyllis Stewart, Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, Mrs. Nadine Lane Gallagher, also Pebble Melton, Isabel Allen, Katherine Luh, Betty Thompson and Evelyn Thomas. Mrs. Florence Hawley directed.

The program also included a novel fencing match by Miss Stella Engleson and Mr. Martin Garvey, of Marjorie Webster School; an Irish reel, by Miss Hannah Sheahan; songs by Miss Thelma Hardy, of the Washington Opera Guild; an act by Tommy Martin, magician, who was there from the Earle; dances by Miss Virginia Barry and Mr. Walter Doe; numbers by Miss Phyllis Fisher; whistling solos by Miss Janet Coon; Suzi-Q, by the Misses Dolores Anderson and Vera Stuart, and a soft shoe dance by them and Miss Bitzi Orr, with a parody on Maj. Bowes' Hour by members of the Encore Club, under Blanche Foote, closing the entertainment.

Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, who was in charge of the refreshments booth, was assisted by Mr. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. William Steele, Mrs. Frank Birgfeld, Mrs. Frank Golden, Miss Flora Schuldt, Miss Flora Huff, Miss Olive Beatty, Mrs. Custis Perry and Miss Alva McNamara.

Judge Gus A. Schuldt was a barker at one concession, assisted by Mrs. Schuldt, Mr. Robert Varnon and Mr. B. E. Germann.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

Elizabeth Haney, of the Business and Professional Women's Club, will be up and down early this morning—up out of bed and down at the Union Station, meeting the first of the B. & P. W. delegates arriving at 7:30. They'll be coming in all day, but the largest group will be that from Chicago on the B. & O. at 8:30, more than 100 strong.

Miss Haney, whose business is meeting trains, will have a special interest in the incoming passengers she greets tomorrow because they are her fellow club members. She'll welcome them and start them on their way sightseeing. The local club with the help of the National Capital Committee, is providing them with guidebooks and giving them a free hand at seeing what they please while they are here.

Tonight, of course there is the All States Banquet at the Mayflower for which the local club has been preparing for weeks. After the banquet most of the visitors will leave at once for Atlantic City—their ultimate destination—where the biennial convention of the National Federation opens Sunday evening.

Nina Kinsella, new president of the local club, will leave by motor, immediately after the party, accompanied by Coye Sligh and Elizabeth Mann. Ruth Robinson, retiring president and honorary chairman of the banquet, was called to Chicago early in the week, but is flying back in time to attend.

* * * *

MARY ROBINSON, of the Department of Labor, had expected to be among the guests but was called to New York on business and cannot be here, although her chief, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, is to be the speaker of the evening.

Miss Robinson, who is director of the division of public information of the woman's bureau of the department, is sailing next Saturday for Sweden to be gone a month. She will visit Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland and Soviet Russia.

MRS. JED JOHNSON, who is one of the active members of the Congressional Club, is leaving with her husband, Representative Johnson, and their youngest daughter next Saturday for a trip home to Oklahoma. Representative Johnson is to be guest of honor at a unique birthday party on July 31 and everybody else about the countryside who has a birthday on that day has been especially invited to the celebration.

He has been instrumental in obtaining for the Wichita Mountain area 50 lakes on the 60,000 acres assigned to the United States Biological Survey.

SO—the birthday party will be the dedication of Jed Johnson Lake, covering 90 acres, in recognition of Representative Johnson's work. A band from the high school at Walters, Okla., the town where he was born and reared, will be on hand for the occasion; Indian dances will be presented by members of the Kiowa Tribe of which he is an adopted chief, and the old-fashioned picnic will include barbecued buffalo meat although that's supposed to be a surprise) and a truck load of watermelons from Rush Springs, which ships out more watermelons than any other railroad point in the world.

D. A. R. National Defense Chairman Describes Her Program.

Broad Field Involved; Peace Is Keynote, She Asserts.

National defense as interpreted by the Daughters of the American Revolution implies a broad field of study and action, involving the fundamental principles on which the United States was founded, according to Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, national chairman of that department of the D. A. R. organization. Mrs. Sisson, who addressed the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia Wednesday morning and conducted a round-table there that afternoon, returned to Washington to spend a few days in her office at National headquarters before leaving for her home in Chicago.

The safeguarding of American ideals and institutions for future generations is part of the program of National defense sponsored by the D. A. R., she said. "We take the responsibility of citizenship seriously, for privilege begets responsibility. We are, of course, for peace; it would be ludicrous for anyone to advocate war and there is no monopoly on the peace idea."

"All of us—those who are pacifists in the accepted meaning of the word and we who insist that under present world conditions a fair-sized Army and Navy are absolutely essential to preservation of the peace and prosperity of our country—can meet on common ground, that of a consuming, overwhelming desire for lasting peace and a wholesome horror of war," she declared. "But, in the procedure that would bring about this desired Utopia, what an insurmountable difference exists!"

"The Daughters of the American Revolution stands for peace, a practical peace such as this world can understand. There is no delusion, however, that the millenium has come and that the helpless have power for good or for peace. The helplessness of China and Ethiopia should be lessons in this day."

Programs destructive to the good they would do are those, Mrs. Sisson believes, which "advocate the disarmament of America, interfere with the carefully developed plans for an efficient national defense, that dictate to those in position to know the needs of the country, that attempt to interfere with the established machinery of government and that train the youth to refuse to defend the land of his allegiance."

Mrs. Sisson has for 20 years been active in the civic and club life of Chicago, having been president of one of its largest federated clubs, a member of the League of Women Voters and of the National League of American Pen Women. As national chairman of the committee on national defense through patriotic education of the D. A. R. she publishes the National Defense News, a monthly bulletin.

It is the first time in the 11 years of the existence of the Institute of Public Affairs the D. A. R. has been asked to co-operate in the program and has had a day designated on which members of the Virginia chapter served as hostesses.

Titanic Legends Are Heard Again.

By Shirley Povich.

Cleveland, July 15.—Hollywood may have thrilled to the Bunyanesque feats of John Montague, the Mysterious Montague, and wondered whence he sprang, but behind the gray walls of a dozen prisons, in the classy haunts of New York's underworld and around the card tables of the professional gamblers where the chips were stacked high, there were guys who knew.

POVICH.

It couldn't be Titanic Thompson — Titanic's whereabouts were pretty definitely established; he never came back from a ride — so it must be Titanic's stooge now blossomed into a character in his own right. It had to be La Verne Moore.

• • • •

Those stunts Mysterious Montague was pulling in the film colony was Titanic Thompson stuff—tricks he had learned from Titanic when Thompson was the biggest sure-thing gambler on Broadway and La Verne Moore was his stooge in his sucker games.

• • • •

Such things as betting he could pull the steering wheel off a truck—and doing it—smacked of Titanic Thompson, who surely would have seen to it that that steering wheel had been tampered with before he laid his money on the line. And when Montague amazed his film friends by throwing a walnut over the top of a high office building, that too, smacked of Titanic.

• • • •

La Verne Moore used to line up Thompson's golf suckers around New York and he learned from Titanic the finesse of shooting an 89 when his opponent shot 90, and the art of shooting a 70 if his opponent shot a 71. Never give a sucker a bad beating, give 'em the "come on," was the motto of Thompson's crowd and Montague apparently learned this lesson well.

• • • •

The fellow Montague was a good golfer, no doubt of that. The pros he had played on the Coast even suspected that he had been a pro, and in that they were correct, for Montague had been an assistant pro at an upstate New York club before he fell in with bad company.

• • • •

That walnut-throwing trick was a direct steal from Titanic Thompson although Titanic used to work it usually with a lemon. He was addicted to walnuts though, even as the movies' underworld characters munching peanuts, and his pocket always bulged with the nuts. Titanic is not known to have lost a bet that he could throw a walnut or a lemon over a high building.

• • • •

His throwing walnut, though, was a specially constructed walnut, one side scaled off to a sharp smoothness so that it would sail into great distances. And when Titanic was throwing his lemons, those were no ordinary lemons. One that he chucked over the Sherman House in Chicago was retrieved and found to be loaded with floating quicksilver that pressed against the rind and added impetus to Titanic's heave.

• • • •

They called him Titanic because of the size of his bets. He'd wager on cards, pool, golf—anything that the suckers fell for. But he sought out the moneyed men for his talents and he was not averse to playing poker with such as the late Arnold Rothstein or Nigger Nate Raymond, now a Sing Sing resident.

• • • •

Titanic was around that evening when Nigger Nate Raymond brought a young fellow named Willie Bernstein from the Coast for a poker session with Rothstein in the latter's hotel room on which occasion Rothstein was taken for $200,000 by the Raymond-Bernstein combine. The stakes were never too high for Titanic.

• • • •

Why, one time in a fashionable bar, Titanic bet a grand that he could cut down a daffodil that was protruding from a vase simply by heaving playing cards at it, one by one. He did it, too. He scaled those cards across the bar so skillfully that each sharp edge left its mark until the thirty-fifth card snapped the stem of the flower clean. It was an old trick of Titanic's—a sure thing with him.

• • • •

And when tales began to drift back East from the Coast that this Mysterious Montague was pulling that same card trick, guys in the East who had been reading of his other feats of strength and skill began to suspect. Particularly were they suspicious when Mysterious Montague who refused to have his picture taken, ever, began to move about in the select circles of the film stars.

• • • •

That is the way Titanic Thompson loved to live—among fashionable people and it was Titanic who first introduced La Verne Moore to the frills of high society. The rough edges were hammered off Montague's character in those days back East when he and Titanic were habitues of the fashionable clubs where ready money was plentiful.

• • • •

Mysterious Montague actually did reach a point in Hollywood life where his new-found friends were willing to back him in a match for $2,000 a side against any member of the pro golf brigade that the pros selected.

• • • •

But Montague shied off when the affair began to get publicity and thought to stall it off by asking a handicap of 3 strokes from the man the pros selected. When the pros, who rated him only as a good club champion, not a star, accepted the match on that basis, Mysterious Montague decided that he didn't want to play the match. He said frankly, he didn't want the publicity.

Cubs Defeat Bees; Lead Loop Again

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 15.—The Chicago Cubs bounced back into first place in the National League today by taking Boston Bees' pitching apart for a 5 to 1 victory.

Dropped out of the lead by yesterday's defeat, the Cubs clouted Guy Bush and Ira Hutchinson for 14 hits today, while Tex Carleton breezed along to his sixth victory of the year with an eight-hit performance.

The win pushed the Cubs past the New York Giants, who were idle today and thereby lost their one-day spot at the head of the parade.

Every member of the Chicagoans' cast hit safely at least once. Leading the attack was Frank Demaree, who collected three singles and drove in two runs. His three hits gave him a total of 100 for the season.

Gabby Hartnett managed the Cubs as well as doing his regular catching duties. He took over the pilot position due to an illness that confined Manager Charley Grimm to his hotel room.

The Cubs opened their scoring with a run in the second on Bill Jurges' triple and Phil Cavarretta's single. They added two more in the third on a walk, Billy Herman's hit, Tony Cuccinello's error and Gabby Hartnett's single. In the sixth, they completed their scoring with another pair on singles by Carleton and Augie Galan, an error by Hal Warstler, and another single by Demaree.

A walk, Bush's single, Debs Garms' force-out and Warstler's fly accounted for the Bees' only run, in the fifth frame.

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—The season's longest winless streak, compiled by the Philadelphia Athletics and stretching to 16 straight games, ended today as the apathetic athletes of Connie Mack nosed out the Chicago White Sox 2 to 1.

George Caster's four-hit pitching, and a ninth-inning run on Jesse Hill's double and Earle Brucker's single gave the Mackmen the victory. The hitting star of the game was Brucker, who scored the A's first run in the fifth inning, tripling to deep center and coming home on Luke Appling's error.

Caster outpitched Bill Dietrich in a hurling duel. The Sox elbower allowed the A's eight hits and fanned four. Caster, in addition to pitching four-hit ball, struck out five.

Is Steele Going Stale? That's What He Fears!

By Bill McCormick

Buddy Scott, perennial enemy of Hobo Williams, could not be located to serve as a sparmate for Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele yesterday so the title holder enrolled the next fighter available—George Abrams, former amateur champion.

Steele was particularly anxious to work against Scott before he concluded his training for his bout against Williams next Tuesday night. Scott has boxed Williams three times, winning the decision once and twice holding the middleweight contender to draw decisions. Last reports have Buddy sojourning in the country—address unknown.

Either Abrams has more promise than even the most optimistic thought or the middleweight titleholder has truly gone stale in his long training siege.

For two rounds an uninformed spectator might have had difficulty telling which was the champion and which was the novice, as Abrams stood toe to toe, punching back at the dreaded Steele. True, Steele slipped many a hard punch, but so did Abrams slip many of his wallops, and at the end of George's session with the champion a qualified judge would have voted the result no worse than a draw.

On occasion, Steele missed punches by feet—punches that earlier in his training siege at Griffith Farms were landing with telling effect. The titleholder seemed particularly puzzled when Abrams bobbed and weaved out of danger, but finally uncorked a punch he has not used at any time here—a right uppercut.

That one punch inflicted practically all the damage done to Abrams, who otherwise unhurt except by a few stiff jabs delivered as he danced away from the champion.

Steele's managers vehemently denied that the champion was overtrained, but Freddie himself—his face drawn and looking very weary after the workout—admitted the hot weather had affected him considerably.

"I have difficulty breathing for about two rounds in this weather," he confessed. "After that I seem to be all right. I would like to see nice moderate weather the night of the fight—say about 40 degrees above zero."

Williams, already in such perfect condition that he has been pronounced ready to fight right now, ran four miles in the cool of the morning, then relaxed the rest of the day trying to hold his fine edge.

The contender spent several hours going from movie house to movie house, viewing films which showed himself and Steele in training activities. These newsreel shots, recorded by four different companies, are taken from different angles and Williams watched the performance of the champion in each shot.

"Harry Groves and I spotted a few things when we peeked at Steele's workout the day those pictures were taken," the Hobo said. "I just wanted to see that we were right, so I went to those theaters and watched the newsreels. I found out that what we had seen in the workout was a fact and I am sure we have learned something that will help us."

Indians Blast Chase From Mound to Win

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, July 15.—The Nats met up with old Earl Whitehill this afternoon, but all the pleasure of the meeting belonged to the ancient left-hander, who dealt Washington its fifth straight defeat off his pitching arm.

The old fellow who was tagged "through" when Clark Griffith shipped him to the Indians last winter revealed an amazing amount of vitality as he poured his wide-sweeping curve toward the plate, held the Nats to nine hits and ushered Cleveland to a 6-2 victory.

He was rather liberal with his hits, except when they could be translated into some precious runs and then he had the Nats batting the ball into the dirt or popping anemic flies to the infield with the consequence that no less than a dozen Washintgon athletes perished on base.

Rookie Hurls for Nats.

Manager Bucky Harris gambled with a rookie pitcher, Ken Chase, and for four innings the lad was a huge success out there on the mound. He went into the fifth inning with a 2-1 lead, but came out of it with a 6-2 deficit and the Indians had the ball game.

The Nats gave him a pair of runs in the second inning when Cecil Travis bashed a single to center, Al Simmons whacked a hot double down the first-base line and a pair of outs moved both runers home, but then they went into complete eclipse.

Chase walked two and struck out two in the third inning, but the Indians came up with a run when Hughes, who had drawn a pass, was moved along by Trosky, who hit a single to right and Solters who belted one to center.

In the fourth coming events began to cast their shadows. All that saved Chase from being scored on was two sensational catches in leftfield by Al Simmons. But the Indians were beginning to belt the rookie southpaw's pitches.

Chase Blows Up.

It was in a very rookie-like manner that Chase blew up in the fifth inning when the Injuns hustled 5 runs home. They began the proceedings with a cheap double off Averill's bat that fell between Travis and Simmons, and then went into a 3-to-2 lead when Trosky socked his nineteenth home run far, far into Lexington avenue.

Chase, obviously unsettled by all this, then walked Solters and when Campbell batted a ball back into the box, Chase threw it into centerfield in his haste to catch Solters at second, Solters taking third and Campbell reaching second. Chase did snuff out a run by grabbing Hale's grounder and catching Solters at home, but then he pitched a single to Pytlak and the third run of the inning scored.

Chase didn't distinguish himself either, when Whitehill followed with a hit back toward the box. He fumbled it momentarily, Hale scored from third and Whitehill was safe at first. That brought Pete Appleton in to pitch and Appleton promptly pitched a single to Lary that scored the fifth run of the inning. He got 'em out, finally, by fanning Trosky with the bases full.

Appleton Pitches Well.

Appleton pitched nice ball after that, holding the Injuns to one hit in the last three innings, but a fellow named Whitehill was pitching some nice ball himself.

The Nats couldn't get Mel Almada any farther than third after he led off the third inning with a double, and they failed to score in the fourth when Travis singled and Simmons was hit by a pitched ball before a man was out.

They made some serious motions in the seventh when with one out they filled the bases on Almada's walk, Lewis' single to center and Kuhel's cheap infield hit, but in this crisis Freddie Sington grounded into a double play, his second effort of the day along those lines.

It was pretty awful.

Charles Town Feature Won by Highland Song

By Walter Haight.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 15.—Highland Song, a speedy little filly which, the records say, was sired by either Gallant Knight or Strolling Player, took the shortest way home along the rail to win the W. B. Packett purse, today's feature event. Before a crowd of 4,500, the majority of whom placed their money on her, Highland Song bounced to the wire two lengths in front of Chief Hollis which had the same margin over Brooke Herod.

The winner, owned by C. E. George, Washington hotel man, paid a stout $3, but it was like good interest on their money to most of her backers.

The race was marked by the disqualification of L. P. Engle's Chief Hollis. The gelding swerved over sharply coming out of the stall gate and bumped Radial which, in turn, interfered with Perfect Host and Rouge Catalan. The ruling moved Brooke Herod into second money and Miss Adeline was awarded third money.

Highland Song ran the route of slightly more than 6 furlongs in 1:20 2-5 over a fast track and under a bright sky.

Daily double players in the crowd who played the combination of Mad Dash and Crossing Over collected an $86.40 mutuel. The numbers 2 and 5 also won yesterday.

It was a sad day for Jockey L. Machado. He was suspended for 15 days for rough riding on Sea Finn in the third race.

Little Mistress, a daughter of Baby Grand, gave the program a long-shot opening when she drove to victory in the first race at a $60.60 mutuel. Ridden by Jockey Leon Garrett, Little Mistress found an opening along the rail, came through and won going away. Hydrangea was second and Cats Cradle, the favorite, was third. Glorioski and Stealing Home, prominent entering the stretch, ran out and lost all chances.

Mad Dash and Malfreda fought it out virtually throughout the running of the second race before the former drew out in the stretch to bring Jockey Palumbo his first winner of the day. The favorite players profited to the tune of a $4 mutuel. Black Brigade was third in the field of eight.

Crossing Over, the property of Mrs. E. R. Black, came through with a victory at $20 mutuel in the third race, a roughly run affair, ridden by Jockey Lauch. Crossing Over interfered with horses at two stages of the race, but came from behind Sea Finn, the favorite, to win going away. Third money went to Justa Jimmie.

Palumbo rode his second winner of the day aboard Mrs. H. W. Wageley's Canteret, a $3.60 favorite. Canteret was in front most of the way and gave her backers no anxious moments. Dolly Tour was a well-beaten second with Counsellor Billy third.

Lady Federal Wins Arlington Event

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—Jumping to the front at the start of the mile feature event, Lady Federal, racing the silks of Clyde Trout of Benton, Ill., galloped to victory at Arlington Park today.

Jockey S. Roberts rode the winner, which had two lengths to spare over J. R. Gilmore's Tornadic, with Bushy third. Repaid, color bearer of C. E. Davison, the favorite, trailed the field.

Lady Federal ran the distance in 1:39 1-5 over a slow track and paid $11.40 to win.

'Golfing Policeman' Leads PGA Entry

St. Louis, July 14 (AP).—Led by Ray Gates, the golfing policeman, who had 151, four St. Louis golfers qualified today for the National Public Links golf tournament to be held in San Francisco, August 9 to 16.

Those who will accompany Gates and the scores they made are Frank Maloney, 152; Jim Spencer, 153, and Bill Bentley, 156.

Cardinal Pewees Win.

The Cardinal Pewees, 1935 champions and as yet undefeated in the present race in the Washington Boys Club League, won a hard-fought contest yesterday from the Northeast Boys Club on the Rosedale Playground by a 5-to-4 score. Harris and Dougherty were outstanding for the victors.

Sandlot Pick-Ups

By Jack Munhall.

A dark horse in the second-half race of the National City Unlimited A League will be the KLEIN'S TAVERN team . . . formerly known as the MOUNT RAINIER GRAYS, the team attracted the interest of KLEIN, who has consented to back it in the second-half play. . . . After a slow start the team is hustling, looking better with each game, and has the material to cause plenty of trouble to ROSE and GORDON, first-half leaders.

BILL LIGGETT, a pitching star at Tech, is the manager as well as the ace moundman. . . . Despite his youth, BILL has shown qualities of leadership . . . Supplementing LIGGETT on a strong pitching staff are such lefties as MIKE MEHALIC and BAYD LIGGETT, who is unlike his right-hand brother . . . Other orthodox hurlers are MAURICE CRIMMEN, a 6-foot-3 husky, and DUTCH GERHARDT, who learned to fog 'em in North Dakota high schools.

This staff is capably handled by two catchers who can hold their heads high in any sandlot company. . . . LEE SHAPIRO, veteran of the sandlots, still maintaining his high standards of receiving, and a consistent .300 batting average gets the call over a promising youngster, JIM WISE, for the first-string catching role. . . . WISE, an all-high choice while at Tech in '36, is one of the better young players.

The infield is manned by former high school standouts . . . Hyattsville's JOE GREEN steps lively around the first base and another all-high selection from Tech, GEORGE LARRICK, plays second. . . . Third base is cared for by JOE MERALLA, a left-handed batter and the team's leader in hitting with a mark hovering dangerously close to .600, with ED LUCKETT, still attending St. Charles High School in Baltimore, rounding out a nice infield at short.

Care of the outer gardens is entrusted to a trio of fleet, hard-hitting boys who will look if you call them, BOOTS MOXLEY, TOOTS SHIPP and RAY CIOMEI. . . . The first named is placed in left field and is known as a good hitter, now boasting a .500 average. . . . the second named patrols center field and boasts of a high batting average, being more of the pesky type than the slugger. . . . CIOMEI, right fielder, is the team's slugger and also relies on a rifle throwing arm which hangs from the right shoulder.

Reserve players include infielders SHORTY REMINGTON and JUNIOR RANDOLT, a pair of promising Mount Rainier High prospects who need a little seasoning before being ready to take over a starting role. . . . For outfield assistance Klein's may summon KARL MERALLA, of Richmond, and SPEED CUNNINGHAM, a graduate of Mount Rainier High School.

LITTLE MISTRESS, broke to find rustling room entering stretch, came through with good speed and held HYDRANGEA safe under a drive. HYDRANGEA came with a good burst in stretch, CAT'S CRADLE went to front at once, was pinched back at far turns and came well when clear. STEALING HOME was carried wide at stretch turn by GLORIOSKI. The latter went to contention with a rush, but couldn't be held in at final turn.

MAD DASH, sawing upground while setting pace and being challenged repeatedly by MALFREDA, drew out in stretch and was in hand at end. MALFREDA pressed the pace throughout, but tired in stretch. BLACK BRIGADE closed some ground in late stages. TODAY LAND stumbled at break, was rushed into contention and faltered.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:33½. Winner, Mrs. F. E. CROSSING OVER, under hustling tactics, cut over sharply to get to front at first turn, was taken under restraint when SEA FINN went to front, rallied when put to drive and won going away. SEA FINN was rushed to front, but couldn't resist the winner. JUSTA JIMMIE, far back for three furlongs, saved ground while bettering position, but couldn't menace top two. PRINCE KHAYYAM was in trouble repeatedly.

DAILY DOUBLE, MAD DASH AND CROSSING OVER, PAID $86.40.

COUNSELLOR BILLY	(Machado)	112	1	2	2½	2h	3h	3h	6.20

CANTERET, sent to front in opening furlong, saved ground and was drawing away under a drive at finish. DOLLY TOUR, always a forward factor from start, closed gamely, but was no match for winner. COUNSELLOR BILLY bothered the pace and was tiring steadily in final furlongs. HEIGH TETRARCH closed some ground. SPEAR tired.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:34½. Off at 4:38. Winner, C. R. George's b. f. Yanks Wallop Tigers, 13 to 6, In Hitting Bee

Detroit, July 15 (AP).—Opposition pitchers were still just dime-a-dozen to the New York Yankee sluggers today as they stretched their undefeated streak to ten straight games with a 13-to-6 trouncing of the Tigers.

Murderers' Row belted Schoolboy Rowe, Roxie Lawson, Jack Russell and George Gill for 14 hits, including homers by Tony Lazzeri and Tom Henrich, and never left any doubt about the outcome after piling up five runs in the first inning.

At the same time, Lefty Gomez and Johnny Murphy, who divided the Yankee pitching assignment, handcuffed the Tiger clouters with five hits, among them home runs by Hank Greenberg (his twentieth) and Rudy York. But for four New York errors the Detroit run production would have been cut to less than half of its final total. Gomez fanned eight in six frames.

Ft. Washington Wins From Ft. Monroe, 4-1

McFadden's bid for fame was cruelly shattered in the eighth, when a resounding triple, the only hit allowed, resounded from the bat of Curry. The deciding game will be played tomorrow at the War College and the winner is to engage the Carlisle team from Bankacker, Pa., winner of the northern play for the championship of the Third Corps Area.

Miss Waterhouse, scarcely known outside of New England, accounted for one of the biggest upsets in 19 years of Griswold Cup competition by defeating Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, seven times cup winner, one up at an extra hole in driving rain.

Miss Bauer won her semi-final match, 3 and 1, against Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., who in five Griswold Cup attempts has been three times a runner-up and now for the second time a losing semi-finalist.

Browns Beat Bosox, 5 to 3, In 2d Contest

Cronin's Homer With One on Base Fails to Hold Off Defeat.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 15.—One big inning in which Manager Joe Cronin's homer accounted for two runs wasn't enough for the Red Sox today and the St. Louis Browns took the second game of the series, 5 to 3.

Boston scored all their runs in the third. After Johnny Marcum had doubled, Roger Cramer brought him home with a mighty triple. Cronin's home run followed, to bring in two runs and complete the Red Sox scoring.

The Browns counted one run in the first. Then four singles and a double in the sixth brought in three more. St. Louis tucked the game away with one more counter in the seventh on Billy Knickerbocker's third double off Marcum and Harry Davis' single off Fritz Ostermueller.

Post Notes on Fishin' . . . . By Bill Ackerman

ACKERMAN

With many shoals of rock under our stern, it must be admitted that only one stands out beyond all the rest—the one we found above Tall Timbers, but then that was no fault of the fish for there was plenty of proof of big ones being taken from each shoal and in numbers far greater than we have ever known.

Admitting, with no evasion whatsoever, that it supplied a lot of fun, the thought seems to persist that the sport isn't all that it should be; that six or eight ounces of lead hung to the mouth of a game adversary goes a long way to discourage the type of battle they are capable of putting up if given a better chance.

But that brings us back to the great problem of all anglers, the way to get them on the end of a line. In trolling the only way they will strike at an unweighted lure is when they are on the top, and as this rise isn't an occurrence that comes often or lasts long, it looks as though there might be other and sportier ways of catching them than going down after them with heavy leads.

* * * *

The surf caster has far the best of the troller with his six or nine thread lines and two or three ounce leads rigged fish-finder fashion, but there are so few places in our bay country that this style of fishing is feasible that it is out without much consideration.

Full of pep from a good night's sleep, laying across the creek that makes Solomons an island, it was decided shortly after daybreak, to head on up the bay and see what we could do with the stripers in the Bloody Point area.

Here, on the tailend of a cruise that had carried Joann 200 and some odd miles, was found what might be the answer to the question—a sportier way to take rock.

For many weeks Capts. Ralph and Bob Lee have been tailing the largest shoals that have been cavorting in the section between Niggerhead buoy and Bloody Point and finally, after indifferent success, decided that the catches and methods of several commercial fishermen working almost in the shadow of the lighthouse would bear looking into.

According to the keeper of Bloody Point Light, these boats have been anchoring just far enough above the light so that their lines, weighted only with split shot, would carry barely below the surface and back alongside the foundations. Chumming and baiting with shore shrimp, their catches have been running from 20 to 50 and in size from 2 pounds to many that were far above the limit.

* * * *

If that won't make a type of sport fishing hard to beat, we know of nothing that will. Anyway, Capt. Bob's boats are going to push it and endeavor to have on hand at all times the necessary short shrimp to make it possible. Week days are better than week-ends because the great numbers of boats keep the fish from rising to the chum, just as they drive them down when the shoals have raised to feed on the small alewives. This is day fishing only.

And on Wednesday, after a lot of thought and work on the idea, the boats got into them as they raised to the surface in the deep water in the middle of the bay, and unweighted Florida feathers, with the heads painted red, literally slaughtered them. So if you try it don't go prepared for only one kind of fishing, but be equipped for both. You might not be so lucky as the anglers off Point No Point on Sunday, who because they had only bottom tackle, when a great shoal of weakfish raised, baited it, trolled with it and caught fish beyond their wildest hopes.

* * * *

The catches of rock on Bob's boat run 54 from 2 to 7 pounds; 29 from 3 to 6 pounds; 39 from 3 to 6 pounds; 28 from 3 to 5 pounds. The following day Milton Gordon and Larry Richey fishing the same shoal got one 4-pounder. The fault was not with the fish, but with the great amount of grass that made it impossible to keep the lures clean.

That shoal of weaks has worked up to the neighborhood of Cove Point from Point No Point and several of the Solomon Island boats got into them for good catches.

Ocean City, Md., continues to be the only bright spot as far as the bluefish are concerned, with the catches running up to numbers that are almost unbelievable for this season of the year. Bottom fishing on the banks still continues to be good.

For the past ten days hardhead fishing has been best in the deeper water, but from now on it should pick up everywhere, that is if you believe in the theory of lunar attraction, and it certainly looks sometimes as though it does have a real bearing on the fish biting.

Doyle to Get Divorce.

San Francisco, July 15 (AP).—Jack Doyle, Irish actor-boxer, said today he intends to divorce Judith Allen, film actress. Departing for Reno by airplane Doyle told interviewers he had "fallen in love" and wanted a "quick divorce" so he may remarry.

Diffenbaugh, Wiffy Cox Are Pro Partners

Al Treder, professional at Manor, will pair with Roland MacKenzie, Congressional mentor, against Wiffy Cox and George Diffenbaugh as the local pros resume their schedule of double-exhibition matches at Manor on Sunday afternoon.

In the other match, Cliff Spencer and Mel Shorey will stack up against Leo Walper and Bob Barnett starting at 2.40 p. m. Treder's foursome will start play at 2:30.

The winning pairs in the previous matches have been split up, as have the sweepstakes victors, in making the new pairings. The matches, that have drawn large galleries in previous performances at Beaver Dam and Kenwood, are scheduled at various courses throughout the season. No admission is charged.

Miss Bessie Taylor and Dr. L. L. Levine, scoring an 89 and aided by a 24 handicap that netted 65, won the playoff for the Cliff Spencer mixed two-ball trophy at Beaver Dam yesterday, over Mrs. George Luce and S. T. Dale. The latter pair scored 103—23, 80.

Champion Is Victor.

Denver, July 15 (AP).—Defending Champion Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., scored a fourth round victory over Joe Lucia, of Houston, Tex., in the Colorado Open tennis tournament today. The score was 6—1, 6—0.

Drenching Rain Kills Drought, Lowers Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—Heavy rains throughout big areas of Canadian drought territory did much to plunge Chicago wheat prices down 2⅝ cents today and prevent any lasting recovery.

Virtual complete stoppage of immediate export demand for wheat from the United States and Canada tended further to increase selling pressure on the market here, and so likewise did word of timely rains in Russia and Australia as well as in Canada, where the moisture was described as the most copious of any this year.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1½@2¼ cents under yesterday's finish; July, $1.24½; September, $1.25⅛@$1.25⅜; December, $1.27¼@$1.27⅜; corn, ½ off to ¾ up, July, $1.27⅛@$1.27⅜; September, $1.12¼@$1.12⅜; December, 80⅛@80¼; oats unchanged to ⅝ lower; September, 37½, and rye, 1⅝@2¼ down; September, 87. Provisions results varied from 5 cents decline to 27 cents advance.

Excess Reserves Rise $80,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last evening that member bank excess reserves had increased $80,000,000 during the week ended July 14. It was the fourth successive weekly increase in these idle bank funds and brought the total supply to $960,000,000. For the four-week period excess reserves have climbed $210,000,000.

The rise during the week ended July 14 was attributable in part to a $67,000,000 decline in money in circulation to $6,457,000,000. When money in circulation decreases, funds flow back into banks, increasing their supply of lendable money. Another factor in the excess reserves increase was a $11,000,000 decrease in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks to $90,000,000. The $11,000,000 presumably was sent into channels of business and trade, moving thence into commercial banks.

Gold stocks increased $47,000,000 and brought the Nation's hoard to $12,423,000,000 on July 14.

Brokers' Loans Drop $60,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $1,147,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $60,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $978,000,000.

Rail Revenues For June 4% Higher in Year

But Class I Operating Income Is Still 23.4% Under June, 1930.

Preliminary reports from 93 class I railroads, representing 81.2 per cent of total operating revenues made public yesterday by the Association of American Railroads, show that those railroads in June, 1937, had estimated operating revenues amounting to $280,287,565, compared with $268,433,167 in the same month of 1936, and $366,106,784 in the same month of 1930. Operating revenues of those roads in June, 1937, were 4.4 per cent above those for June, 1936, but 23.4 per cent below June, 1930.

Freight revenues of the 93 class I railroads in June, 1937, amounted to $223,161,818, compared with $216,486,249 in June, 1936, and $273,311,427 in June, 1930. Freight revenues in June, 1937, were 3.1 per cent above the same month of 1936, but 18.4 per cent below the same month in 1930.

Passenger revenues in June, 1937, according to these preliminary reports from 93 class I railroads, totaled $32,246,775, compared with $29,040,266 in June, 1936, and $56,740,757 in June, 1930. For the month of June, 1937, they were 11 per cent above the same month of 1936, but 43.2 per cent below the same month in 1930.

Kennecott to Build $5,000,000 Smelter

New York, July 15 (AP).—Kennecott Copper Corporation will build a $5,000,000 smelter at Hurley, N. Mex., for its Nevada Consolidated and Chino properties, it was announced today. The new plant, expected to be in operation by the end of 1938, will have sufficient capacity to convert entire production of the company's Grant County mines into blister copper.

For many years concentrates of the Chino mines have been shipped to the American Smelting and Refining Co.'s El Paso, Tex., smelter under a contract which runs through 1938.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Steel and General Electric Advance; Wheat and Cotton Futures Decline.

New York, July 15.—Government bonds were strong and stocks which were considered at all to speak of were pushed ahead, but irregularity and small price changes prevailed in shares. Stock turnover was again lower, it requiring four hours to produce a half-million shares. Commodities also felt the hand of profit-taking. Cotton lost more than $1.25 a bale and September wheat dropped 2⅛ cents to 125⅛ cents a bushel.

The fading prospects for the passage of the Supreme Court packing bill are helping the rise in both the stock and bond markets, but fortunately the return of confidence is based upon something more than the supposition that the New Dealers have lost a few yards on the football field. The quarterback has a disconcerting habit of trying new plays, and, in any event, the death of Senator Robinson presumably opens the way for appointment of a "liberal" to the Van Devanter vacancy.

Meanwhile, the spirit of speculation is low in Wall street, outside the commodity trading centers. That may be highly desirable from the standpoint of those who fear an outbreak of inflationary markets, but it is a little wearing on the nerves of others who wish to see lively markets, partly for their own operations and partly for the highly beneficial effects an advancing and active share market always has on business confidence.

Good Business.

Second quarter earnings statements are now coming in quickly, and for the most part they show gains. Corporations which show declines had prepared the market for the poor news. The principal item in the day's column of reports was that of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. The further improvement in earnings reflects the expansion in business activity throughout the country, although a little salt has to be sprinkled on to offset the diversion of communications business from the telegraph companies.

Railroad freight traffic is running well above a year ago, but the prevailing weakness in railroad stocks is a brake on the general market. Railroad shares are responding to the fears of another increase in wages which would settle the question of whether a great many roads have much hope of covering fixed charges outside reorganization, let alone paying any dividends to their owners. Only a much greater boom in business than seems to lie directly ahead could enable most roads to absorb another addition to the wage bill.

In the foreign exchanges sterling and francs were kept under good control after an early recession. This week's statement of the Bank of France suggests completion of a heavy covering movement in the past week among speculators who feared a squeeze after the abandonment of gold. The bank's gold holdings were unchanged, and it is highly improbable that any more gold will be given up by France, to a foreign control fund or to any one else. Note circulation also fell. The Bank of England added only a small amount of gold, but the equalization fund may have bought a good deal.

Steel Financing.

The feature of the stock trading was the relentless drive in Steel common. After a little early hesitation the stock resumed its advance, and by early afternoon topped 115. The financial community is watching the rise with an eye to new financing as well as anything else. It is generally supposed that the higher above par the common moves and the more strength it shows in the higher levels, the sooner the corporation will complete its plans for obtaining new capital, as a reimbursement for heavy plant expenditures and as a replenishment of working capital now drawn upon to pay the preferred dividend arrears.

General Electric was another stock to impress with its robustness. Traders felt that the market scarcely could have two better leaders, and consequently was not cast down by a good deal of irregularity in various groups. General Motors was firm and the street heard estimates of second-quarter earnings, to be published a week from Monday, running only a little below the $2 a share earned in the second quarter of last year, Chrysler recovered after an early fall to 100.

Railroad shares managed to avoid going through another sinking spell. Their tone was firm, but recoveries were not noteworthy. The Wabash issues lurched heavily on publication of details of the proposed reorganization, which involves assessments of the stocks. Pittsburgh United, the market upset yesterday, was calmer. The common gave up a point and the preferred three points.

Stocks acted as though they hadn't anything definite in mind.

Wabash.

The reorganization plan for the Wabash at last gets back to first principles in providing fairly stiff assessments on the stock, just as used to be done in the old days before 77 was joined by some alphabetical symbols. Since the assessment will fall heavily upon the Pennroad and since the Pennsylvania Railroad proposes to retain control of a reorganized Wabash, presumably other shareholders must resign themselves to kicking in with the extra money or throwing down their cards. In any event, the Wabash is unlikely to emerge from receivership for a long time.

Peggy

The Treasury Department announces that in May it found it desirable to buy, for account of the various Government departments, only $3,853,000 of Government bonds. In June (presumably just before the new financing at the tax date), it was found advisable to step up the purchases to around $25,000,000. That was slightly smaller than the peg put under the market a year ago in June, when over $30,000,000 in bonds were taken from the market.

French Gold Outflow Comes to a Halt

Paris, July 15 (AP).—Evidence that the heavy outflow of gold from the Bank of France which a fortnight ago caused a financial crisis and a drop in the franc has ended for the time being was seen in the Bank of France's statement for the week ended July 8 made public today showing gold holdings at 48,859,359,303 francs, unchanged from the preceding week. In the previous statement a loss of 6,000,000,000 francs during the reporting period was shown.

Home Owners Are Increasing 2,500 Weekly

5,703 Institutions Now Making Insured Mortgages.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Complete reliability and trustworthiness of 5,703 private financial institutions making mortgages under the insured mortgage system is responsible to a great degree for the fact that American families are turning to this method of achieving home ownership at the rate of 2,500 per week, Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald explained recently.

Approval of a lending institution by the Housing Administration, Mr. McDonald said, in recognition of the stability and financial soundness of that institution, an element that should induce public confidence in those lenders operating under such approval.

"All applications for mortgage loans," he said, "either to buy a house already built or to build a new one, are made to financial institutions already approved by the Federal Housing Administration for that purpose. This factor, in itself, should give the public a sense of confidence and the knowledge that the transaction, which will be continued through many years, is in the hands of an able and reliable financial institution, for only the thoroughly trustworthy may be approved under the national housing act. This may be a State or national bank, a savings bank, a mortgage company, a building and loan association or a life insurance company or its authorized agent.

"The reliability of those institutions approved by the Housing Administration to make insured mortgages has further gratifying influences. The confidence which the borrower may feel in them is one element, but there is also the confidence which the Housing Administration can feel that all loans will be properly serviced. A loan remains a good loan only so long as it is properly serviced and the sound character of our approved mortgagees assures ample protection to the mutual mortgage insurance fund which is the bulwark of the insured mortgage system. It is these highly reputable institutions that have handled a mortgage business accepted under our system of governmental insurance totaling $835,417,627, (as of June 19, 1937)."

Independence Fund.

The midyear review of Independence Fund of North America, Inc., represented locally by Slauson, White & Rowe, Inc., states: "While we are not inclined to minimize the significance of the many unfavorable factors which are now confronting the business world, we are of the firm opinion that, aside from a major European conflict which is unpredictable but which seems unlikely in the near future, by early fall business improvement will be evidenced and by the end of the year considerable progress will have been made.

"It is likely that stock prices, in particular will advance consistent with the prospective improvement and that by the end of this year they will be substantially higher than present levels. The long-term outlook for high-grade bond prices is less favorable as the upward trend in interest rates will adversely affect future prices.

Jones to Speak.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will address the convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters at Denver in August, according to announcement by O. Sam Cummings, chairman of the convention's program committee. Another speaker of national note will be Dr. Glenn Frank, of Madison, Wis., whose subject will be "Insuring the Nation's Future." Many local life insurance men plan to attend the meeting, the program for which has now been completed. Of the 36 speakers, but 11 will deliver prepared addresses, the remainder presenting their individualized ideas on insurance in brief form.

Chipman to Sail.

Before leaving for a visit in Europe this week G. Bowie Chipman, manager of the local office of Laidlaw & Co., expressed optimism regarding the New York stock market outlook, saysing he believed the market will see higher prices in September than those now prevailing.

He based his forecast on the business outlook which he considers very favorable, heavy advanced orders for steel being one of the brightest omens some of the largest corporations having sufficient orders for the remainder of 1937. Mr. Chipman is now the dean of Washington brokers, being engaged in the business longer than any other in Washington, a record held previously by the late W. B. Hibbs.

Aircraft Prospects.

Billings of aircraft manufacturing companies this year are likely to total well over $100,000,000 to compare with about $77,000,000 last year and a previous peak of $71,000,000 in 1929, according to an analysis of the aviation industry contained in the F & B Industries Service, survey of 28 industries published regularly by Fenner & Beane, New York Stock Exchange firm. Sales billings for the industry in the first five months already total roundly $40,000,000, up 56.6 per cent over the same period a year ago.

Banking Notes.

The interior of the Franklin branch of City Bank is being remodeled, cageless counters being installed.

Andrew Saul, secretary of the B. F. Saul Co., was elected today a member of the board of trustees of the Home Plate Glass Insurance Co. of the City of Washington.

Rising Wages Major Problem For Industry

Increases Since 1933 Run From 6.3 to 71.8 Per Cent.

New York, July 15.—Increasing wage costs are one of the major problems confronting industry and trade at the present time, and because of the general confusion of ideas as to what industries pay the best wages and which industries have increased wages most since the depths of the depression, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, has prepared the following table showing average wages per hour paid in 38 different industries in March, 1937, and the present increase in these hourly rates from June, 1933:

*Decrease.

While these wage rates and their relative increase during the recovery are significant, another highly important factor enters into the picture as an indiaction of the ability of corporations in any given industry to increase wages further. This is the relative importance of labor costs entering into the value of product or of sales totals.

It may be readily seen that a 10 per cent increase in wages in an industry in which labor costs are only 9.1 per cent of the value of the product, which is the case with the manufacture of automobiles, is of much less moment than in coal mining, where labor pay roll makes up 55 per cent of the value of product. In the case of automobiles costs would be increased about 1 per cent; in the case of coal mining, the advance in costs would be more than 5 per cent.

Bank Clearings Gain 15.8% Over Year Ago

Volume Turns Upward First Time in Three Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—Although somewhat below the preceding week, the bank clearings turnover in the United States this week displayed a rise over the corresponding period of last year for the first time in three weeks. New York, as well as the outside centers, shared in the rise.

Eccles Favors 'Alien Investors' Tax Increase

Reserve Chief Also Urges Capital Gains Levy to House Group.

By the Associated Press.

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said yesterday he favors drastic taxation of nonresident aliens who have investments in this country.

He told reporters the 10 per cent tax now applicable to earnings of such investors should be increased to about 22½ per cent, or 25 per cent.

He also advocated a capital gains tax to reach foreign speculators, and said income surtaxes should be applied to both groups.

"Why should these people be permitted to invest their money in this country, enjoy all the benefits of such investment and not pay taxes comparable with our citizens" Eccles asked.

Appearing before the House Banking Committee earlier in the day, he said securities purchased with foreign capital had contributed "in no small measure" to financial difficulties experienced here in recent years.

Reminded by a committee member that the State Department had opposed taxation of nonresident aliens last year on the ground it might interfere with the reciprocal trade agreement policy, Eccles replied:

Oh, yes; but I think they will go along now."

Asked whether he thought the proposed taxes would be included in legislation being drafted to plug alleged "loopholes" in the revenue laws, Eccles said it appears to him "we are not going to get anything this session."

He testified Government purchase of the 12 Federal Reserve member banks, proposed by a Congressional bloc headed by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, would save the Government no more than $6,000,000 annually.

Eccles challenged Patman's assertion the Reserve Board pursued deflationary policies when it increased reserve requirements by 50 per cent on two occasions.

"You can't say the action of the Reserve system restricted credit," he said. "It did not reverse policy when it increased reserve requirements, but merely adjusted itself to a new gold policy."

Plans Drafted For Voting by Cleaning Union

Election Under Wagner Act to Be First of Kind Here.

Final arrangements for a consent election to determine employe representation in the cleaning and dyeing industry were completed yesterday, according to announcement last night by Calvin Cousens, head of the local Laundry and Cleaners Union, which has led the strike in the industry for the last three weeks.

First election of its kind in the District, it will be conducted under provisions of the Wagner act by the National Labor Relations Board early next week, Cousens said.

Many workers who have been out on strike were back at their jobs yesterday under a temporary agreement between plant owners and union guaranteeing reinstatement pending the election. Cousens charged, however, that several employers have kept strikers from their jobs, pleading a slack period in business. He said that individual complaints on behalf of more than 75 workers would be filed by the union with the Labor Relations Board, and an attempt would be made to force payment of back wages for the period of the alleged lockout.

Cousens said one plant would be charged with forcing employes to sign an illegal contract providing for their resignation on payment wages which had been owing to them when the strike started. He said this would not affect the election since the pay rolls in force before the strike opened will be used as the basis of voting.

Mrs. Charles Collier, president of the League of Women Shoppers, consumers' group which has been supporting the union, said last night her organization would continue pressure for reinstatement of workers, and support for the union's program.

Meanwhile, possible affiliation with the C. I. O. was on the schedule for the local union, which has hitherto been affiliated with the A. F. of L.

Dismissed PWA Official Denies Lobbying Charge

By the Associated Press.

Capt. Jabez G. Gholston, dismissed as director of the PWA inspection division for alleged lobbying activities, denied the charge yesterday.

The former director said Secretary Ickes did what he believed to be his duty, that "he honestly felt that I organized and directed an extensive lobby to influence Congress to make an appropriation for the Public Works Administration. In this respect he was mistaken."

Nantucket Bemoans Trade Loss

By the Associated Press.

Nantucket, Mass., July 15.—Business men in this island summer resort tonight bemoaned the "loss of thousands of dollars daily" as a strike of employes on the only steamship service linking this island with the mainland entered its third day.

At Boston, State officials conferred with representatives of the strikers and of the New Bedford, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket Steamship Line in efforts to settle the dispute. The line is owned by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

The strikers, members of the International Seamen's Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, demand wage increases and shorter hours.

Gilbert Manter, chairman of the Nantucket Island Development Committee, estimated loss of income to the island's business men was $10,000 a day.

On the adjoining island of Martha's Vineyard, also cut off from the mainland by the strike, merchants also estimated their daily losses as heavy."

Meanwhile, a fleet of small fishing craft and two small freighters plied back and forth between the islands and the mainland, carrying food supplies and passengers.

Members of the Twenty-sixth Division Air Service, on orders of the Governor, stood ready to put the division's fleet of planes into service, if needed, to convoy supplies and medicine to the islands.

Trust Won, Public Lost, SEC Is Told

By the Associated Press.

Witnesses in the Government's investigation of the $200,000,000 Tri-Continental (investment) Corporation told the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday of 300 per cent profits for stock operators and 40 per cent losses for the investing public originating from the boom days before 1929.

Testimony was given principally by Richard Maynard, of Maynard, Oakley & Lawrence, New York brokers, whom the S. E. C. questioned with a view to recommending to Congress tighter control of investment management.

Maynard said the security management company formed by his firm and a group of bankers and brokers in 1928 was able to control a $12,000,000 corporation on an investment of $58,000.

The "inside" group, he said, obtained two-thirds of the "B" or voting stock of the Capital Administration Co., for $58,000, while the public invested $12,000,000 in the corporation's nonvoting stocks and warrants.

NLRB to Give Ruling On 4 U. S. Dismissals

The latest case of alleged union discrimination in the Federal service—the dismissal of four employes by the Baltimore Social Security Board—will be aired out before the National Labor Relations Board.

The S. S. B. Union, an affiliate of the United Federal Workers of America, a C. I. O. unit, said yesterday the board officials had agreed for the case to go before the N. L. R. B. In all, six employes were discharged by the board at the end of their probationary periods and two were reinstated. The U. F. W. A. will provide the union with legal counsel. No date has been fixed for the hearing.

Decrease in Apple Prices Predicted

By the Associated Press.

The Department of Agriculture said yesterday the prospective large supply of apples this year will result in prices lower than the relatively high prices of 1936.

The department added, however, that if consumers' incomes remain near present levels, "as seems likely," prices of the 1937 crop probably will "average higher than those of 1935 and perhaps as high as those of 1934."

The July 1 condition report indicated a 1937 crop of 194,000,000 bushels, which has been exceeded only twice in the last 15 years, in 1926 and 1931. If the final outturn is as large as indicated, the department said, production this year will be 65 per cent greater than the small crop of last year and about 20 per cent above the 1931-35 average.

Dr. Holmes Accepts Morgan College Post

Dr. Dwight O. W. Holmes, dean of the graduate school of Howard University, yesterday accepted the presidency of Morgan College, Baltimore, a position to which he was unanimously elected June 22.

Dr. Holmes, who is a member of the boards of the Family Service Association and the Northern Settlement House of Washington, came to Howard in 1919 after 15 years as a teacher and officer in the Douglass High School, Baltimore. He was made dean of the college of education in 1920 and placed in charge of the new graduate school in 1934.

D. C. Man Loses Car, $40, Clothes To Armed Bandit

Le Maire H. Ross, of 5919 Fourth street northwest, returned from Baltimore yesterday with no car, no money and very few clothes after a harrowing two-hour ride through the Maryland countryside with a bandit.

The car was reported recovered as Ross told his story to Baltimore police. But his suit, shoes, $40 and business papers are gone.

Ross, a tire salesman, said a man approached him, pistol in hand, Wednesday night after he had left a Baltimore restaurant and was unlocking the door to his sedan. The bandit said, "Get in and drive out route No. 1," according to Ross.

Near Woodlawn, Md., Ross reported that he was told, "Here is where you get out." Ross was left on the road in his stocking feet.

He made his way to a county police station, where he borrowed clothes and money and returned home.

Yesterday he visited Baltimore again to report to the city police.

New York, July 15 (A.P.).—James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, who wore shiny black knee breeches for Britain's coronation, came back to the United States today with a word of praise not only for his own, but for the legs of other American men at the ceremony.

"The Americans who wore knee breeches at the coronation festivities showed a fine set of legs," said Gerard. "There wasn't a knocked knee or a handied leg in the whole outfit."

Brewers Union Asks Injunction On Teamsters

A long smouldering feud between the International Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers of America, less elegantly known as the Brewery Workers Union, and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, better known as the Teamsters Union, broke into the open in District Court yesterday when the Brewers Union began litigation to determine which union shall have jurisdiction over the more than 30,000 beer wagon drivers in the United States.

Both unions are affiliates of the American Federation of Labor.

According to the 40-page suit filed by the Brewers Union, there has been battling between the two groups for more than 37 years. Each has sought to have official action taken by the A. F. of L. to determine the question, which was finally resolved, the brewers claim in their favor.

Despite that, the complaint claimed, there have been attempts by representatives of the Teamsters Union to force the drivers into their union. Attorneys Martin F. O'Donoghue and Lawrence J. Mills represented the complainants.

After listening to an ex-parte explanation of the purposes of the suit, Justice Joseph W. Cox signed an order requiring the defendants to appear August 7 and show cause why they should not be preliminarily enjoined from attempting to molest or coerce members of the Brewers Union into joining the Teamsters Union.

Futrell Says Robinson Post Should Go to Wife

Little Rock, Ark., July 15 (A.P.).—Former Gov. J. M. Futrell issued a statement today asserting that Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson is the "logical successor to her distinguished husband for his unexpired term."

Futrell said that "off-the-record predictions by Democratic leaders indicate the groundwork is being quietly laid for a meeting of the Democratic State Committee within a week to nominate Gov. Carl E. Bailey to fill the vacancy in the Senate."

Contract Bridge

The Long Suit.

Few players realize the power of a long suit. The dummy may expose in full sight a five-card suit headed by the nine-spot and most defenders will see only its weakness in top cards and will overlook its potential strength.

South's deceptive play in the hand below gave West some excuse and the danger of the spade holding gave him some more, but he should have seen the need for haste.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ Q 8 5 ♡ K 7 3 2 ◇ 9 8 6 5 2 ♣ Q
♠ K 7 4 ♡ 6 5 ◇ K Q 10 ♣ A K 6 3 2	North West East South	♠ A 10 6 3 2 ♡ 9 8 ◇ 7 4 3 ♣ 10 8 4
	♠ J 9 ♡ A Q J 10 4 ◇ A J ♣ J 9 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Dbl.	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

South's rebid to four hearts was a trifle optimistic. A double raise over a take-out double is by no means a very strong bid, being merely pre-emptive in nature. With a strong hand, partner would redouble. South went to four hearts partly in the expectation of having some play for it and partly to make sure the opponents were kept out of a possible game in spades.

West opened the King of clubs, and then tried to decide on the proper shift. Trumps seemed safest, so West led his top trump, South winning with the Ace.

Declarer saw that the opponents could take a diamond and two spades whenever they got the lead, unless they were lulled into a false sense of security. From the Queen in the dummy and the Jack in his own hand he could tell that the spade holding in each defender's hand might be such that a lead away from it appeared undesirable. Hoping that the weakness of the dummy's diamond suit would lead the opponents to think themselves secure, South led the Jack of diamonds at trick three.

West won with the Queen of diamonds and, just as South had hoped, felt that there was no danger in that suit. He saw no reason for attacking the spade suit, and led his remaining trump.

South won, and cashed the Ace of diamonds. A club was next ruffed in dummy and a diamond ruffed by South. This established two long diamonds in dummy, giving South enough discards to make his contract.

West should have realized that even if South had only two small diamonds, dummy's long cards would provide discards for spade losers. Therefore, the only hope of obtaining any tricks in the spade suit was to attack it at once. The objection that South might have the Ace and that the lead away from the King of spades might give South his contract was not valid, since if South had the Ace of spades it would be practically impossible to defeat the contract.

Bald Eagle Camp Gets 3 Children

Due to donations made during the day, three more children yesterday were admitted to the new Bald Eagle Hill Camp, conducted by the Tuberculosis Association. The number of children at the camp now totals 73, which is 13 more than were provided for in the association budget.

The bed capacity, however, is 125 and there is a long waiting list of tubercular children when money is made available.

The gift announced yesterday was a check for $160 from the committee in charge of the moonlight sail benefit of the Central Business Men's Assocation. Billy and Shirley Hamby, for whom the gift was intended, were taken to camp immediately by Miss Sara Shriner, camp nurse. With them also went their little brother, Donald, because of other donations received. Contributions should be made to Mrs. Ernest R. Grant at headquarters of the association, 1022 Eleventh street northwest.

Fined for Long Hours.

Pleading guilty of violating the eight-hour working day for women employes, Henry Leibel, manager of a South Capitol street cleaning establishment, was fined $20 in Police Court yesterday by Judge Edward M. Curran. Eight employes had complained.

Woman to Enter N. Y. Mayor Race

New York, July 15 (A.P.).—Miss Dorothy Frooks, who opposed Mrs. Caroline O'Day for Representative at large in 1934, announced tonight that what New York City needed was a woman Mayor—and she'd like to be it.

"The men candidates are all perfect—in their way," she said, "but we need more heart in the city government, more understanding." She said she was seeking the mayoralty nomination as a Democrat, but she was not yet ready to discuss nomination plans.

Democratic leaders met with Tammany Leader James J. Dooling today for the third time in recent weeks to discuss the question of choosing a candidate for Mayor, but adjourned without reaching an agreement. Dooling had said previously he planned to tell the four other county leaders he believed Senator Royal S. Copeland should be chosen by the Democrats to run against Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

The Rev. Patrick William Browne, S. T. D., Ph.D., associate professor of history at the Catholic University and a faculty member since 1921, died yesterday in St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore.

Father Browne was born at Carbonear, Newfoundland, December 21, 1864, the son of Thomas and Catherine Casey Browne. He was educated at St. Patrick's Academy there, and St. Bonaventure's College, at St. Johns. His ecclesiastical studies were made in Rome, and in 1920 he received the degree of doctor of sacred theology from Laval University, Quebec. He was ordained in 1887.

His graduate studies in the field of history were made at Columbia University, Harvard, Munich, Germany; Oxford, England, and at the Catholic University, which he entered in 1918, receiving his Ph.D. in 1921.

Expert in Research.

Dr. Browne spent much time in research in the archives at Quebec, the Staats-Bibliothek, Munich; Bodleian Library, Oxford, and Simancas and Archivio de Indian, Spain.

From 1909-1911 Dr. Browne was professor of history at the University of Ottowa. He served as professor of French at Maryknoll Seminary, New York, 1916-1918, coming to the Catholic University for additional work in the field of history in the latter year. Since 1921 he had given courses in history at Trinity College and at Catholic Sisters College as well as at the Catholic University.

Contributed to Magazines.

Dr. Browne was a contributor to many magazines and newspapers in both the United States and Canada and was the author of "Where the Fishers Go—the Story of Labrador," "Beginnings of the Catholic Church in the United States," "Church History," the "Hartford Conference" and other books and monographs. He contributed largely to the Ecclesiastical Review and to the Homiletic Review. He was at one time the editor of the Catholic Historical Review and was a member of the Catholic Historical Association and the Columbia Historical Association.

Father Browne had been in ill-health for some time at his home, 1406 Lawrence street northeast, and entered the hospital recently. The funeral mass will be celebrated in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the campus at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Deaf Couple Pledges Marriage Vows by Signs

"I pronounce you man and wife" was "spoken" in complete silence yesterday when Ethyl Phay and Kenneth Nelson were married in the office of Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, at the Senate Office Building.

Bride, bridegroom and the Rev. Arthur D. Bryant, who conducted the ceremony, were the only ones who could be sure when the final pronouncement was made, for it was all done in sign language. The three principals are deaf.

The couple are natives of the State of Washington, and their romance began ten years ago when they were students at the State Deaf and Blind School in Vancouver.

Nelson came to Washington several years ago, graduated from Gallaudet College, and for the last 18 months he has been employed as proofreader in the WPA mimeograph section here. The bride came from her home in Vancouver for the ceremony. They will make their home at 639 M street northeast.

MR. AND MRS. KENNETH WILSON.

Representative Knute Hill, of Washington, was best man, while Robert Duncan, chief of the mimeograph department where Nelson is employed, also was present.

Mr Bryant is 81 and is pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, where he conducts Sunday evening services every week except during the summer. He has been a resident of Washington for 77 years and, since he was ordained in 1911, he has been called upon regularly to conduct sign language marriages. Within the last month he has married four couples.

He entered Gallaudet College in 1865, eight years after its funding, and upon graduation he joined the faculty. He served as instructor and professor in the are department for 36 years. He retired from active duty when he entered the church service, but still holds a position as inactive member of the faculty.

Dr. Simons had an important part in the organization of the republic and served for two months as president pro tem of the nation in 1925, between the death of President Friederich Ebert and the inauguration of President Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg.

Retiring from the supreme court in 1928, Simons devoted himself to efforts for unification of Protestant creeds in Germany. He also advocated "practical co-operation" of Catholics and Protestants.
